Truth About the Pact
We Don't Take Advice
Women in Business
Work Starts at Last

—By Arthur Brisbane—

PRESUMABLY, the naval pact, handed to this country by France, Britain and Japan, will be signed by the Senate under pressure. It is called a "peace pact." When did we threaten anybody's peace?

The fact is that the United States is to be bamboozled into giving up the right to manage its own affairs, because Britain cannot afford to compete with us in expenditures, but can outwit our weakminded representatives.

Did Great Britain, before 1914, when she had the money, ask our advice about HER navy?

She did not. She built the greatest navy in the world, openly announcing her intention to have a fighting fleet as powerful as any other two fleets combined. She had it.

Now, she can't afford it. Uncle Sam can afford it. But his governing mind is provincial, stands in awe of the British, yields to their demands.

That's the unpleasant truth.

Mrs. Edison wants women to go back to the home because they "lose prestige in business."

"Deep down in her heart, every woman wants a home," the distinguished lady told her hearers. This is true, but every home needs a man to support it and protect it.

Between "losing prestige" and washing dishes and clothes for an incompetent male, the intelligent woman decides to relinquish a little prestige.

If every one could find a husband like Thomas A. Edison the problem would be easy.

Lindbergh gives the League of Nations transit section detailed suggestions for aviation. Standardization of airways, uniform marking and signals, a comprehensive meteorological and radio reporting system, uniform regulations for clearing are suggested.

The recommendations are sound, but the people are too busy to pay attention to recommendations, from no matter how high a source.

Except in California and a few other states, we have not been able to agree on a code of automobile signals.

In the great State of New York, for instance, when a man puts his hand out and wiggles it, you don't know whether he will turn to the left, to the right, stop dead or back up.

Conan Doyle's family expect messages from him, and they will get messages, many, but they will not come from Conan Doyle.

Mediums, sincere or fraudulent, cannot invent anything from the dead that sounds plausible.

Merely to say, "Mamma is very happy," or "Papa sends his love" is not convincing.

Men cannot really imagine a spirit life. Therefore, they cannot invent any reasonable message from a soul separated from its body.

Work has actually started on the Boulder Dam. Good news.

Probably, the power and water, in the end, will be owned by private individuals, paying a small sum to the government in proportion to cost, peddling the power and water to the public for all the traffic will bear.

But, at least, the water and the power will be used. That is a start.

Later, if the people have brains enough to run their own affairs as efficiently as the corporations that exploit them, they will know what to do about Boulder Dam, Muscle Shoals and other properties. Once men did not own even their own bodies or lives. They do not yet own their natural resources. But they will, some day.

In the Imperial Hotel at Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, ingenious thieves stole $690,000 worth of jewelry from a Chicago woman. A $290,000 pearl necklace was included.

You could not persuade the woman that she is just as well off without the jewelry as she was with it. May as well say to a peacock, "You don't really need that tail," or to a woman dancing in Senegambia's hot sunlight, "You don't need that nose ring."

Senator Swanson of Virginia, who accepts the theory that foreign nations should be allowed to tell us what ships we may have, says that rejecting the pact would bring upon us the world's enmity, and we should "lose moral leadership by rejecting that pact."

We should lose more than that, if war found us unprepared.

There are many things more important than moral leadership, and they include airplanes, submarines and fast cruisers.

Garrett Hunted Off New England Coast

Boston police today requested the authorities of all New England coastal cities and towns to be on the watch for Oliver B. Garrett, who may be cruising in a 40-foot power boat that cleared Providence the day before he disappeared, 17 days ago.

According to information given the police, Garrett began his cruise in a former rum runner, provisioned for a month, on the eve of his default in Superior court on extortion charges.

The former liquor raider wore smoked glasses as his only disguise, according to the report and the craft was headed for Narragansett Bay.

If Garrett is cruising the coast in a motorboat in order to avoid detection he is following a program followed with considerable success by both Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion.

The police were advised that the craft in which Garrett is cruising

BANANA KINGS THREATENED BY BLACK HAND

Home in Cochituate Guarded After a Note Is Received Demanding $10,000

The fact that George A. and Frank W. Arancio, North End "banana kings," and owners of Mauston Inn, have received threatening letters from a man suspected of being responsible for the Wall st., New York, explosion, was learned today.

For three weeks police and postal inspectors have been working desperately to trace the author of the letters, and the summer home of the Arancio brothers at Cochituate is under constant guard.

The first letter, [illegible] contained a demand for $10,000 and subsequently [illegible] were made, the black hand communications being turned over to the authorities unanswered.

Several times the police have had their quarry almost [illegible] grasp, but on each occasion he has been able to slip away.

The Arancio brothers are among the most prominent merchants of New England, with a wholesale fruit store at 149 North st., where for 15 years they controlled the so-called small banana trade.

FRENCH OCEAN FLIERS DOWN

Dakar, Senegal, July 9 (AP)—Jean Mermoz, noted French airman, on the first West to East transatlantic air mail flight between South America and Africa, was forced down on the sea when well over half way across today.

He and his two companions, Leopold Gimme, radio operator, and Jean D'Abry, navigator, were rescued and the 600 pounds of air mail they took aboard on leaving Natal, Brazil, yesterday was saved.

Mermoz, three hours earlier had discovered an oil leak which apparently was not serious. However, two hours before he came down the oil pressure dropped alarmingly and he sent a wireless message that he was heading toward the dispatch boat Phocee, one of several patrolling the route in case of emergency.

The Phocee started to the rescue, met the plane, and took aboard the three men and the mail which was to be transferred to another dispatch boat and carried at full speed to Africa for relay by plane to Paris.

Mermoz came down in seven degrees north latitude, about 650 miles southwest of Dakar. He had enough gas to fly 12 hours more and had hoped to reach Dakar by 5 p. m.

He came down at 12:30 a. m., 6 a. m. E. D. T., after he had been in the air 14 hours. The weather was god and there was little wind.

BLACK REOPENS TREATY FIGHT

Washington, July 9 (INS)—A revolt among supporters of the naval treaty was threatened in the Senate today as debate continued on the McKellar resolution requesting President Hoover to transmit the secret documents of the State Department upon which the treaty is based.

Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, announced he would either vote against the treaty or vote present if the documents are refused, and Senator Black, Democrat, Alabama, declared he would vote for postponement of final decision on the treaty.

Washington, July 9 (AP)—Advocates of the McKellar resolution calling on President Hoover for the international correspondence leading up to negotiation of the London Naval Treaty renewed their arguments at the opening of the Senate today, while administration leaders pressed for an early vote.

Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, author of the resolution and an opponent of the treaty, placed in the record a letter from Mrs. William Cumming Story, a former president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, complimenting his opposition to the

HOOVER NOT CUSTODIAN OF FILES, ASSERTS SENATOR BLACK

TREATY FIGHT REOPENED BY ALABAMAN

pact. She wrote she was sending letters to all senators urging delay in ratification.

HALE TO SPEAK.

Senator Hale, Republican, Maine, chairman of the naval committee, was waiting for a vote on the McKellar proposal with a 10,000-word speech to open the fight against the treaty itself. He hoped to make the address before the day was over.

After a bare quorum of 49 senators answered the roll call, Senator Black, Democrat, Alabama, called for adoption of the McKellar resolution on the ground that it involved a right of the Senate and was not a question of publicity.

BLACK FOR DELAY

"This question of the informal negotiations transcends in importance the question of the treaty itself," Black said. "I voted for a favorable report on the treaty in committee. I expect to vote for it in the senate. I shall vote, however, if a motion is made to that effect, to postpone a vote until the rights of the Senate have been recognized and respected."

The Alabaman contended the President was not the "custodian" of the files in the state department and that the secretary of state was responsible to Congress and not to the Chief Executive.

Despite the Senate's insistence, as a co-equal part of the treaty making power of the government, to have the full facts in passing up the pact, the President is expected to refuse on the ground that "it is incompatible with the public interest."

This concealment of these vital documents will cast a cloud upon the treaty, for, as Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, remarked in closing the debate:

"Some of the papers have been sent to the Senate by the State Department, under the seal of confidence, while others were withheld. Was there something to conceal?"

A move to furnish the President with the "incompatible with the public interest" loophole was made by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader and a member of the American delegation to the London conference. He proposed an amendment to the resolution by Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, to insert the phrase.

That this maneuver to emasculate the resolution was planned in advance by the administration's board of strategy was apparent. When Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the foreign relations committee, declared he believed the Senate should have the papers, but suggested the inclusion of the phrase, Robinson promptly asked McKellar to accept the amendment.

McKellar refused to fall into this trap. Instead he aroused the Senate by declaring that the body was entitled to all the facts about the treaty and added:

"If the President refuses on any grounds to send these papers to the Senate, it is the duty of the Senate to reject the treaty."

WARNING BY JOHNSON.

Johnson warned the Senate that once before it had acted upon a treaty to its sorrow, without knowing anything about the secret understandings on which it was negotiated. He referred to the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, affecting the rights of European nations in South America.

"After that treaty was ratified, it was discovered that the British ambassador had written a note to the State Department, putting an entirely different interpretation upon the treaty than given it by the American government," said Johnson. "If that note had been made public at the time the treaty was considered in the Senate, a large number of senators would never have voted to ratify the treaty.

"These documents may be of grave consequence or again of little consequence to discussion of this treaty but the refusal of the administration to turn them over to the Senate creates a situation which ought not to be tolerated for a moment."

KEEPS VIGIL BY BODY OF WIFE

Pittsburgh, July 9 (AP)—A story of nightly vigil for more than a week beside the body of his wife who died after he had struck her was told today by Kim McNab, 54, as he lay in a hospital with his throat cut. The vigil was kept under a porch at their home, where McNab had sought to conceal the body.

McNab told of a quarrel with the woman, who police said, was his common-law wife, on the night of June 30. He struck her and she fell down a flight of stairs, he said.

"For more than five hours I held her unconscious in my arms until she died," he stated.

Then, he told the police, he carried the body to a bedroom and kept it there until the night of July 2, when he removed it to a hole beneath the porch. There he kept his lonely watch until Monday when he cut his own throat and slashed his abdomen. Since Monday he had been in his bedroom without food, water or medical aid, he claimed.

was seized by the government for rum-running and was bought for him at public auction by his friends shortly before he disappeared. One or more persons is said to be with him on the boat.

Authorities viewed the theory with considerable credence, but placed no credence in the note washed ashore in a bottle at Castle Island telling that Garrett was on a rum schooner off Swampscott. Supt. Michael H. Crowley declared the note a hoax.

HIS WIFE SICK

Mrs. Florence H. Garrett, wife of the missing former liquor raider, is a "very sick woman," private detectives reported today to Dist. Atty. William J. Foley.

The district attorney was informed by detectives watching the movements of Mrs. Garrett at Franklin that she has lost 40 pounds since the disappearance of her husband.

Strain and worry and sleepless nights have taken their toll of the attractive wife of the ex-raider and there is a possibility that should Garrett be apprehended now she would not be physically able to stand trial with him and Mrs. Lillian V. Hatch on the extortion charges pending against them.

For two weeks now she has been under constant surveillance by detectives in the Franklin camp hired by Garrett shortly before he dropped from sight on the eve of his trial, and authorities are convinced she knows no more of the whereabouts of her husband than do they.

She is in semi-seclusion, rarely leaving the camp, and is visited only by Mrs. Hatch, who calls daily, but does not spend the night there, detectives report to the district attorney.

Although she has made no public statement it is believed that the police theory that her husband was slain to close his mouth, has fastened itself in her mind and daily, as no tangible clue to Garrett is unearthed, is increasing its hold upon her. She is pale and worn and obviously suffering a mental torture that is sapping her physical strength.

Leo Manfredonia, one of Garrett's three bondsmen, was today ordered by Judge Wilfred Gray in Superior court to forfeit $200 bail and $4.35 costs to the county for the default of Charles Pacci, defaulter in the "Onlywon Pool" case, who has never been captured.

Pacci disappeared after telling police Garrett ran the pool whose Hanover st. headquarters netted the authorities 100,000 tickets in a raid, and that was last September.

BOTTLE NOTE PUZZLE

By an odd coincidence, the person who crudely printed the note found in a whiskey bottle by Frank A. Rhodes, marine photographer of West Springfield st., South End, neglected to include the name of the vessel, thus placing the indelible stamp of hoax upon it.

Dean of the Cardinals Was 93; Had Been Ill for Several Days

Vatican City, July 9 (AP)—Cardinal Vannutelli, 93-year-old dean of the Sacred College, died late today after several days' illness.

Almost until the end, he retained consciousness, talking to prelates at his bedside. Just before he died he received a visit from Francesco Giunta, under-secretary to the Prime Minister, on behalf of Mussolini.

The cardinal died, with the customary blessing from the Pope, followed by a special blessing.

Vincent Cardinal Vannutelli became dean of the Sacred College in 1921 upon the death of James Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore. He is said to have been responsible for inauguration of negotiations for settlement of the age-old Roman question during the early years of the regime of Premier Mussolini.

BROTHER WAS DEAN

Cardinal Vannutelli was born December 5, 1836, at Genazzano, diocese of Palestrina, of a noble family. His brother, Serafino Vannutelli, also was a cardinal and dean of the Sacred College at the time of his death in 1915. Their grandfather was Count Vannutelli, grandmaster of the household of Napoleon's sister, Princess Pauline Borghese, and afterward to her mother, Letitia Bonaparte.

After his ordination in 1860, Cardinal Vannutelli spent nearly 20 years in Brussels and Holland. He was elevated to archbishop in 1880 and delegated to Constantinople as papal envoy.

His next mission was as internuncio at Brazil. Later he was named nuncio at Lisbon and was there when created a cardinal in December, 1889. He returned to Rome in June, 1890.

With his diplomatic training Cardinal Vannutelli added to his equipment as the ideal Vatican representative an imposing figure and gracious bearing. He was six feet five inches tall.

He represented the Holy Father at the coronation of Alexander III of Russia and was pontifical delegate to the Eucharistic Congresses in Tournay, Metz, London, Cologne and Montreal 1906 to 1910, respectively.

When he went to London to preside he was the first papal legate sent to the British capital since the days of the Reformation.

After the Montreal Congress in 1910, Cardinal Vannutelli visited the United States and spoke at the consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York.

Cardinal Vannutelli was prominently mentioned as a candidate for the papal throne at the conclaves that elected Popes Pius X, Benedict XV and Pius XI.

Happy Again

MARITAL TROUBLES, which have on two occasions threatened to end in the divorce courts for Walter Hill, son of the late James J. Hill, railroad builder, and his bride, the former Mildred Richardson Hill, former Follies girl, have been smoothed out again. TWO AMERICANS LOST ON PLANE

Berlin, July 9 (AP)—Two Americans, Miss Ruth Patricia Northrop, 25, of Philadelphia, and John L. Burkholder of Mount Pleasant, Penn., were believed to have drowned with three other passengers in the capsizing of a German flying boat which made a forced landing off the coast of Denmark in a rough sea yesterday.

The flying boat left Stettin, Germany ,yesterday, in the Kalmar-Stockholm service. A gale came up and crumpled the left wing forcing the pilot to make an emergency landing in the sea near the Island of Bornholm, Denmark.

The pilot, mechanic and one passenger were rescued by the Danish ship Maja, which had taken the plane in tow. The other five passengers disappeared in the sea after the plane capsized. Efforts to rescue them were made by several other boats which had rushed to the assistance of the plane, but so far as could be determined none of the five missing was picked up.

ROGERS LAUDS DISCIPLINE AT DEVENS

By AL WHELTON

Camp Devens, July 9—The higher military and the master mind of life philosophy were to be greeted today by national guardsmen and C. M. T. C. students as more than 8000 of the youths swung into another day of summer training.

The Citizens' Military Training Unit greeted Prof. Robert Emmons Rogers of M. I. T., brought here by Col. Frederick G. Knabenshue, commanding officer of the camp and officer in charge of the C. M. T. C.

LAUDS DISCIPLINE

"The best way any young man can attain individuality and leadership is through discipline," he told 880 of these youths.

"To quote Governor Winthrop, the first executive of this State, 'the wiser part of society is always the lesser,' and now I take it that through your attendance at these camps you show you are capable of action, of self-government and capable of learning discipline.

"Every time I have a graduating class before me to receive their diplomas I seem to visualize 100 ghosts beside each graduate, the ghosts of young men from grammar school who fell by the wayside.

"As I look at you I visualize 1000 ghosts beside each one of you; the ghosts of the boys who failed to attend this camp."

He talked at length to the boys, stressing that the approach of the ordinary man on the street is too slipshod and that this attitude of loose goodfellowship is responsible for many abuses prevalent in our democracy.

"Because we fail to respect ourselves we tend to develop an inferiority complex," he concluded.

DECLINES REVIEW

"I invited Prof. Rogers to talk to my boys because I feel he is a man well able to handle young minds and instill into them the value of clean, wholesome living," Col. Knabenshue said.

"I wanted the boys to see and hear a man whom I greatly admire for his views."

Gen. Walker, while he will be given the courtesy salute at camp, declined a divisional review in his honor, stating he did not ,want to disrupt the routine training of the division.

Gen. Walker was saluted at the main gate with the customary 13 guns as he met Lieut.-Col. William McGinnis, former Legion leader and member of Gen. Foote's staff.

He was escorted to division headquarters to be greeted by Gen. Foote and then made a formal inspection of the Lawrence Light Guards of Medford, attired in snappy dress uniforms as a guard of honor.

After his national guard visit he was the guest of Col. Knabenshue at luncheon.

Mrs. Arnold

The marital affairs of the Arnolds have been in the courts for years. The wife is suing for divorce and yesterday declared her husband is two months in arrears in alimony.

She had been awarded $3333.33 a month and the occupancy of the Arnold home at 270 Park ave.

Mrs. Edison Wants Women Homemakers

New York, July 9—Mrs. Thomas Alva Edison, wife of the famous inventor, in a recent radio talk urged the women of the nation to abandon high-minded ideas towards professional and business careers and pay more attention to the business of home-making.

Mrs. Edison

"America is essentially a nation of homes. The woman who doesn't want to make a home is undermining our nation," Mrs. Edison said in part.

She attributes the trend of women towards careers to woman suffrage and the World War. She contends that these two factors are responsible for the decline in the art of home-making in recent years.

"Flying Waitress" Gets Her Pilot's License

New York, July 9—Miss Beulah Unruh, a midtown waitress, received a limited commercial air pilot's license yesterday after having successfully passed tests at Curtiss Field.

Beulah Unruh.

The "Flying Waitress," who comes from Betterton, Md., is five feet two. She has blue eyes and curly auburn hair. She said she prefers flying because it keeps her out in the open.

She began taking lessons last fall at Curtiss Field. She said her tuition cost her $1300, or the equivalent of 13,000 10-cent tips.

She intends to continue until she has flown the required number of hours for a transport license.

PARENTS OF HUB DEBUTANTE FLY TO SIDE OF STRICKEN DAUGHTER

HOP FROM HUB AIRPORT TO KANSAS

Alarmed by the serious illness of their debutante daughter, Barbara, 19, Mr. and Mrs. John West, of 8 West Hill pl., Beacon Hill, took off from Boston today in an airplane for Independence, Kan.

Leaving the airport at dawn they expected to reach Independence where Miss West lies ill, this evening.

For three weeks Miss West, who made her debut last Fall, has been visiting in the West friends who attend with her the exclusive Spence school in New York.

A week ago she was stricken ill at Independence and was taken to a hospital. For the past three or four days her parents have been in touch with the hospital, and because of reports received yesterday, left today by air for her bedside. She is believed to be suffering from influenza, contracted while visiting Miss Emily Ewer in Kansas.

THREATENED BY BLACK HAND

at 21 Cumberland st., Back Bay, but for several months have been living at Cochituate, only a short distance from Mansion Inn, one of the most prosperous roadhouses in the State.

It was learned that the first threatening letter was intercepted by a clerk, who turned it over to the federal authorities without calling it to the attention of the Arancio brothers.

This letter demanded $10,000 "for a worthy cause," asking that the money be placed in a certain spot on a certain day.

A second letter reached the brothers, and they turned it over to Dist. Atty William J. Foley.

HOUSE IS GUARDED

Asked if he was handling the case, the district attorney said:

"I know nothing whatever about a Cochituate house being under surveillance and have nothing to say at this time concerning the blackmail case you mention. All I will say is that there is a matter under investigation by detectives assigned to my office from the police department."

It was learned, however, that the Cochituate house is constantly guarded, and that the Arancio brothers are also receiving protection in and out of business hours.

Seen at their place of business the brothers denied having received blackmail letters or that their father, Joseph Arancio, 80, had been sent any.

MAKE LIGHT OF MATTER

Frank Arancio said Italian families are always receiving this kind of letter and do not take the trouble to notify the police.

Nevertheless it was learned that the hunt for the blackhand letter writer is being prosecuted vigorously, and that he is suspected of being the person responsible for the bomb explosion which wrecked the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co., killing 24 and injuring 200.

This explosion, which menaced the United State sub-treasury, occurred on September 16, 1920, at noontime, just as an army of clerks and stenographers poured into narrow Wall st.

It shook the entire financial district, and created scenes such as New York had never witnessed.

Although local police, private detectives and secret service men worked unceasingly on the case for years, the perpetrator was never brought to justice.

How Sir A. Conan Doyle Believed Spirits Existed

FAIRIES LIVE, but have no soul, was the declaration of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in a recent interview with George Sylvester Viereck. Doyle said they were like plants and insects. This unusual photo was taken from Doyle's book, "The Coming of the Fairies."

THE MATERIALIZATION OF A SPIRIT? This strange photograph of ectoplasm issuing from the mouth of a medium was one of many used by the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to prove the existence of a spirit world whose inhabitants returned to the world in which we live. (International Newsreel).

HUB ELKS CASE LIES DORMANT

Atlantic City, N. J., July 9 (INS)—Reports that there would be a fight today in the national convention of Elks to have restored the charter of Boston Lodge, No. 10, revoked last June as a result of Volstead Act padlock proceedings against the clubhouse, failed to materialize.

Among the delegates at the executive session today were John W. Cussen and Peter McCarron, respectively exalted ruler and secretary of the Boston Lodge. Cussen said he doubted that anything would be done about the matter at the convention, as he was inclined to "let it ride and see if the charter isn't restored in the natural course of events."

The Boston Lodge in question has a membership of 5580.

Vatican City, July 9 (INS)—Mgr. Paolo Marella, auditor of the Papal legation in Washington, was received by Pope Pius today.

Lady Lawyer Says Chivalry Dead in Business World

Chicago, July 9 (AP)—Take it from Miss Martha L. Connole, a modern Portia attending the directors' meeting of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs here, most women are not out in the business world because they want to be.

She thinks they have been "kicked out" of the home. And furthermore she says it is getting harder all the time for women to succeed because "chivalry has fallen into the ashcan."

Miss Connole, who hung out her shingle when women attorneys were a novelty, expounded her views today in commenting on a radio talk by Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, in which the inventor's wife was reported as urging women to return to home making and pay less attention to the lure of professional careers.

"And where," asked Miss Connole, "is the home we are to return to?"

"Moreover for nearly every woman who is working there is some man—father, husband, son, brother or other male relative, dead or alive—who has fallen down on the job of providing for her support."

This war of the sexes, as she sees it, will not hinder marriage, in her opinoin, for "romance has a way of surviving."

"Women will marry because they want to establish a home and not because they have to have a living. Then marriage will get on the basis for which it was intended—reproduction. The modern business woman makes a better mother than the wishy-washy, sheltered young thing who doesn't know what it is all about."

START DRIVE TO OUST MOSES

Washington, July 9 (AP)—Difficulties in the Republican national organization today, with the foes of Claudius Huston repeating demands for his retirement as chairman, while he apparently was just as determined to carry on.

There also was talk of a drive against Senator Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the senatorial campaign committee, who is believed by several Senators to be allied with Huston in his stand against the opposition.

Republican Senators, principally the young guard, complained against Huston to Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader. They suggested that he go before the meeting here tomorrow of the officers of the national committee, who have been called together by Huston.

"UP TO HOOVER."

A close friend of Huston, Senator Watson, indicated he was loathe to move and there were signs today that he had put the issue up to President Hoover. The President is still undecided, so far as anyone knows, on what steps to take, if any.

Meanwhile, much interest was taken in the report from Vermont that the state committeeman there, Earle S. Kinsley, had been asked to take the national chairmanship temporarily at least—and in the White House denial that the President had had any communication with Mr. Kinsley.

KINSLEY'S DENIAL.

The Vermont man at his hotel here today said he had never been offered the party chairmanship.

"There has been no tender to me nor any discussion with me by President Hoover of taking the position now held by Mr. Huston."

Kinsley visited the White House today and after discussing the situation with the President for about 20 minutes, expressed the opinion that Huston should make way for another chairman.

Huston is expected to return to Washington late today and some move by him is awaited.

Wing to Daughter, Ill

Business Men Ask Wider L St. Bridge

The new bridge to be built to replace the bridge recently destroyed by fire at L st., South Boston, should be 75 feet wide instead of 39 feet 4 inches as is now planned, a group of business men from that section told Mayor Curley at a conference in his office today.

The mayor, after discussing the matter, took it under advisement. It is believed the original plans for the new bridge will be carried out because construction of a larger one would mean a complete tieup there for at least a year and a half.

FOE OF MERGER BIDS FOR STOCK

Youngstown, O., July 9 (AP)—For reply to a charge that he was holding up construction of a $12,000,000 sheet steel mill by blocking merger of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. with the Bethlehem Steel Corp., Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland capitalist, offered in court today to buy 100,000 shares of Youngstown Co. stock at $120 a share.

The offer was refused by James A. Campbell, veteran chairman of the Youngstown Co., who was on the witness stand for cross-examination in the suit brought by the Eaton group of stockholders to enjoin the merger.

"I wouldn't want to sell at 120," said Campbell.

"Didn't you place a value on the stock of 110?" asked Crawford.

"Yes," retorted Campbell, "but we should get 133."

Judge Davis G. Jenkins, "against better judgment," allowed the offer to stand temporarily in the record, although former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, chief attorney for the defense, objected to it as not pertaining to the suit. Crawford declared it would fit into the record later.

The charge that Eaton was holding back development by merger opposition was made by Campbell from the stand yesterday.

Man Found in River at Springfield

Springfield, July 9 (AP)—Police are seeking the identity of a man found in the Connecticut river today. In pockets were a gold watch, $10 in cash and a tag issued by the local street and engineering department, which may lead to identification.

WIDOW WAITS FOR MESSAGE FROM DOYLE

Friends Think Spirit May Have to Get Used to New World First

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE
(Universal Service Special Cable)

London, July 9—As preparations moved inevitably onward to lay the earthly body of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in its last resting place in Sussex soil on Friday, Lady Doyle and her friends last night awaited the first word of the noted writer from the spirit world.

Before his death, the noted writer and Spiritualist made a pact with his wife, to the effect that within a week after his passing, he would communicate with her from the spirit world.

Friends do not place a time-limit on the communication, and with Sir Oliver Lodge, himself a champion of spirit messages, they believe the spirit of Sir Arthur will first have to acclimatize itself to the new world before trying to transmit his thoughts to his flesh-and-blood family.

All sincere British mediums are now sitting in darkness, awaiting a spirit message from Sir Arthur. Not even the passing of William Stead, who was drowned on the Titanic, has caused such concentrated efforts to communicate with the beyond as are now going forward.

From the home of Sir Arthur, where the body awaits burial in the family garden on Friday, and where there are no visible signs of mourning, there is not a whisper of an attempt to communicate with the departed, because the widow and her sons realize that he is not yet settled in the new sphere, and has not strength enough to rouse himself from the shock of translation.

GUARD AGAINST FRAUD

So Universal Service is informed by Spiritualists closest to Lady Doyle. The same sources warned against frauds in Britain and America, who are most likely to perpetrate "authentic" messages within the next few days.

Universal Service learns that by the remarkable agreement between Sir Arthur and his wife, when he atatempts to communicate within a week, as he promised, he will give certain key words unknown except to his wife and himself, to prevent a fraud in this sphere or one by the "habitual jokers" on the other side.

Lady Doyle, herself mediumistic, is confident that her late husband, whose material form is soon to be laid away, will contact her through Phineas, her spirit control, in whom she and Sir Arthur placed great faith. Adrian, their son, is also steadfast in the belief that his father will not desert them. He said today:

"My father believed he would be able to keep in touch with us. We believe alike. He will often speak with us, and will warn us against the practical jokers on the astral plane who make such sport of humans. Our close association with father and our knowledge of his habits will prevent false communications being taken for real."

SIMPLE BURIAL SERVICE

A simple burial service will be held at Crowborough, where Doyle lived and died, on Friday, when the Rev. Drayton Thomas will say prayers and deliver the invocation. This is in accordance with Sir Arthur's express wishes.

When a Steam Shovel Set a Fire

'Five-and-Ten' Wedding

'Woolworth' Heiress Is Brilliant London Bride

London, July 9—In one of the most splendid weddings of the year, Miss Maysie Gasque, 26, of New York and London, heiress of some of the Woolworth chain-store millions, today became the bride of John Roland Robinson, 23, London barrister and Cambridge graduate.

Daughter of the late Clarence Warren Gasque, head of the English division of Woolworth's, Miss Gasque was left a million dollars, a magnificent mansion in Hampstead suburb, and 30 per cent of her father's Woolworth holdings in his will.

The journey to St. Margaret's, London's most fashionable wedding church, was made in a magnificent auto whose interior was a copy in miniature of a Louis XVI drawing room—including even a ceiling painted in a design of cherubs.

The honeymoon will be spent in France and Italy, after which bride and groom will return to London, where they will live in the Hampstead mansion, which is packed with priceless art treasures acquired by the late C. W. Gasque.

SEIZE $250,000 RUM; NAB 25

Ossining, N. Y., July 9 (AP)—A 60-foot yacht, its cargo of liquors valued at $250,000, a motorboat, five trucks, two sedans and 25 prisoners were seized today by state troopers at Briarcliff on the Hudson river at Scarsborough, N. Y., a mile south of Sing Sing prison and a few rods from the estate of Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker.

One of the prisoners, Peter Piscipello of Valentine, Pa., was shot in the abdomen as he attempted to escape. He was taken to a hospital in a serious condition.

The raid was made just before daybreak. Police said the yacht crew was unloading the liquor.

FLEE BLAZE AT U. S. HOTEL SITE

The downtown district of Boston was thrown into an uproar this afternoon when a gas main on the site of the old United States Hotel, at Beach and Kingston sts., burst sending flames 20 feet in the air. A steam shovel struck the main while workmen were excavating.

At the sight of the flames workmen scattered in all directions and it wasn't until the gas company was called that safety was established and operations were resumed.

POWER GRAVE AGAIN MECCA

From Massachusetts, Maine and Pennsylvania, cure seekers came today for the first full day of the reopening of Holy Cross cemetery, Malden, for visitors to the grave of Rev. Patrick J. Power.

Lame persons, one with an eye affliction and others with various ailments, paused to pray at the new grave to which the priest's body was moved after hundreds of thousands made pilgrimages to the old grave last November.

Those who knelt at the grave were in addition to more than 300 who attended the regular Wednesday mass at the chapel.

Five autos with Maine registration plates and four with plates of the Quaker State drew inside the gates while their occupants knelt in prayer at the new grave.

Women and men were evenly divided in the groups that stopped.

SEEKS TAX ON GREEN ESTATE

Bellows Falls, Vt., July 9 (AP)—Continuation of the town of Rockingham's tax case against the $67,000,000 estate of the late Hetty R. Green, former resident, who died in 1916, was certain today.

A committee of three, J. F. MacLennan, N. L. Divoll and J. E. Byrnes, was named at a special town meeting last night to investigate further the town's case. Power to employ counsel was given and they were ordered to report at another special meeting as soon as possible.

M'DONALD WINS BY 3 VOTES

London, July 9 (AP)—By a majority of only three votes, the MacDonald government today scraped through a division on the finance bill which had been regarded as critical.

A liberal amendment to the finance bill, which it had been considered might cause the downfall of the laborite government, was rejected by 278 votes to 275.

THEORIES ON SPIRITUALISM EXPLAINED IN INTERVIEW

EXCLUSIVE

(Copyright, 1930, by the Boston Evening American.)

Following is the first instalment of the remarkable interview which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle gave shortly before his death. In this and succeeding instalments the man who was hailed as "one of the greatest mentalities of our time" explains why he believed he had pierced, through science, the cosmic curtain of mystery between Life and Death. It is all the more fascinating because the eminent man believed his spirit would return to earth and communicate with those yet alive.

VIERECK—Who is the greatest mentality of our time?

DOYLE—Sir Oliver Lodge.

VIERECK—Is there any one in America who is the equal of Sir Oliver Lodge?

DOYLE—There are some eminent scientists in America, but no one who possesses the great spiritual insight of Sir Oliver. Hyslop, the most notable investigator of the spiritual world in the United States, died too soon. Nevertheless, there is in America a marked uprising of the spirit which reveals itself in the fact that men like Henry Ford, the most amazing master of material the world has ever known, is interested in meta-physics.

VIERECK—Do you believe in reincarnation, like Henry Ford?

DOYLE—I believe that the soul is born and reborn many times. I am not sure that it ever dons again the human form after it has discarded that garment, but my thoughts incline that way.

VIERECK—Ford told me that an inner voice, resembling the spirit mentor of Socrates, guides him in all his decisions.

DOYLE—I read with pleasure the news of Henry Ford's spiritual progress. Sooner or later I am sure he will land in our camp.

VIERECK—Do you consider Ford a great man?

VIERECK—Why?

DOYLE—Because he is uncorrupted by his millions. No man can tell if he is incorruptible until such wealth is thrust upon him.

VIERECK—Ford said to me that the object of life is experience. There is, he thinks, no loss in the bookkeeping of the soul because even loss is gain of experience.

Real Aim of Life

DOYLE—The aim of life is not experience but spirituality. Experience may help us to obtain spirituality. Again it may not. It may leave us sodden sensualists and gluttons. If you take experience right it makes you a better man. If wrong, you set your face backward on the road of the soul's progress.

VIERECK—Ford believes that every living thing has a soul. You told me that the little fairies have no souls.

DOYLE—No I think they are like plants or insects. Something between the two. They are not part of the world intelligence.

VIERECK—What evidence have you to substantiate your claim that fairies actually exist?

DOYLE—The evidence which I have presented in my book, "The Coming of the Fairies," is very strong. I show photographs of them from several different sources.

VIERECK—Photographs may be retouched or there may have been another picture on the plate from the previous exposure.

DOYLE—I had the negatives examined by the Kodak people and other experts to make quite sure there was no fake. I do not forget my scientific training when I cross the threshold of the spirit world. There is no reason why one should lose his common sense in investigating the spirit world.

VIERECK—I still cannot quite reconcile myself to the doctrine that the poor fairies, if they exist, have no souls. You yourself speak of a world intelligence. Don't you think of that intelligence as God? Pantheism, which says God is everywhere, seems to be the faith of many enlightened men. I have talked with some of the great personalities of the world—men like Shaw, Einstein and Hauptmann, the great German poet. All these men seem to feel that there is such a thing as a world brain.

DOYLE—I am not satisfied with this vague pantheism. I am tired of being fed on words, words, words. The human soul wants concrete individual manifestations of God. I find these manifestations in spiritualism. It is possible that the earth itself may be alive. Perhaps you have seen my story which deals with this subject? But all this is too fantastic, too remote. Spiritualism is nearer and more real.

VIERECK—How real?

DOYLE—Real enough to form a party controlling one-quarter to half-million votes in England. We founded the party in order to end the persecution and the martyrdom of mediums. We addressed the Liberal, the Conservative and the Labor party in the last election. We received answers from all. The reply from the Liberals was the most satisfactory. If they had carried the country in the last election they would have given us a royal commission to investigate spiritualism and the persecution of mediums. Like all followers of new religions, we must be prepared for persecution. Our people are persecuted in every country, including the United States.

VIERECK—How did you become a spiritualist? Through some great experience?

DOYLE—No. Purely by ratiocination. I was brought up a Catholic. Subsequently I became a Rationalist. I could not imagine a God with a preference for any religious or racial group. I cannot picture to myself an Almighty who confines salvation to a clique. My rationalism was largely the outgrowth of my medical studies. I expressed my rationalist philosophy in the Stark-Munroe letters. That book is largely autobiography. Dissatisfied with rationalism, I studied literature and philosophy. Spiritualism threw a light across my path like that which Paul saw on the road to Damascus. I visited the people who wrote about spiritualism. I studied the case of spiritualism where others denied the new knowledge "a priori" or dismissed it with a contemptuous gesture. Schrenck-Notzing, the German savant with his para-psychics, stops at the half-way house between this world and the next. He, and scientists like him, who confine their investigation to the mechanics of telepathy and spiritual phenomena are, in a sense, super-materialists. Nevertheless, they open new avenues to thought. My studies, extending over 40 years, have convinced me that independent intelligences exist who call to us from other sides of the wall. The survival of personalities is the basis for all religions, but all, with the exception of the reincarnationists and the spiritualists, are silent upon the nature of the survival.

VIERECK—Did you have any personal contacts with the spiritual world?

SOME EXPERIENCES

DOYLE—When Geley, the French savant and spiritualist, died, I was sitting with a medium in England. Suddenly, I heard the whispered word "Geley." I asked in French, "When you had your accident were the moulds you carried broken?" The answer was "Oui, oui, ils etaient casses." Though the medium, a commerchant, did not know a word of French, the spirit communicated through him in that language. He told me several details. I asked him in French: "Have you any message for your wife?" He replied: "Au revoir." This is only one example out of hundreds where I have spoken with those who have changed their vibrations and whom we call "dead."

VIERECK—Is it not a pity that when the dead speak to us they have so little to say?

DOYLE—The most important thing to say is that they exist at all. But not all messages are trifling. Did you read "The Psychic Recollections of a Musician," or did you see "Is This Wilson?" written by Mrs. C. A. Dawson Scotts? Both Wilson's style and his idealism are unmistakable in this book.

VIERECK—I am afraid I have read neither of these two books. But I have seen an alleged posthumous book by Oscar Wilde, "Psychic Utterances of O. W.," by Mrs. Travis Smith.

A WILDE INCIDENT

DOYLE—I knew Oscar Wilde when he was living. In that book I recognize poetic and epigrammatic passages which are as characteristic of Wilde as anything that bears his imprint. If I were preparing an anthology of Oscar Wilde's works I would include passages from his post-mundane work. Messages that seem trivial to others are often not trivial to the person addressed. If my son, who died during the war, had come back and postulated some vague, philosophical hypothesis I would not be convinced. But when he reminded me of some match in which I had to wear two right boots, having lost one in the course of the game, a fact unknown to anyone else because of its triviality, I was overwhelmed.

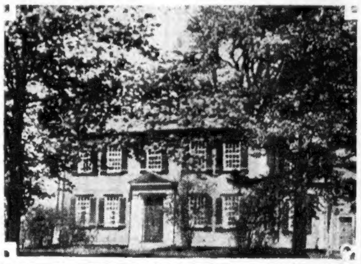
VIERECK — Nevertheless, it seems unfortunate that the messengers from the other worlds never convey to us a single new truth.

DOYLE—Your attitude is due to your unfamiliarity with the literature of spiritualism. One of our writers, Vale Owen, has published messages from the other world with calculations too intricate for me which seem to point in the general direction of the Einstein theory. (Doyle points to a work in four volumes reposing in one of his bookcases.)

(This is first of two articles by the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in collaboration with George Sylvester Viereck. The second article will appear in tomorrow's Boston American.)

Tercentenary Pilgrimages—No. 26

HOME OF PARSON STEARNS, BEDFORD



ON THE EAST SIDE of the old Fitch Tavern in the historic town of Bedford, stands a "one chimney" house dating back to the 18th century. It was the home of Parson Stearns.

Reverend Samuel Stearns spent many years of his life guiding his little flock at Bedford. New England clergy in the early days of the nation was an aristocracy of educated thinkers, whose great influence upon the lives of their congregation shaped the destiny of the colony of English settlers.

These were so engrossed in a struggle with the wilderness that they had little opportunity to secure other than practical knowledge needed in every day living, so the parson in each community was, indeed, a leader and an autocrat.

WED PARSON'S GIRL

The ecclesiastical families intermarried, as in the instance of Rev. Samuel Stearms, who chose for his bride, the beautiful Abigail French, toast of the town of Andover. Her father was Parson French.

Rev. Samuel Stearns was ordained in 1796. He was the son of a minister and his ancestry on both sides was of the clergy. He graduated from Harvard and for 37 years guided his people through the early days of the young nation. He was teacher, leader, friend, and his name is as well-known in Bedford now, years after his death, as during his ministry.

OPENED SEMINARY

He married Abigail French in 1797 and of her it may be told that she was "a lady of rare fortitude, energy, intelligence and practical wisdom as well as piety."

Rev. Stearns was one of the pioneers in education for women inaugurating a women's seminary, one of the first of its kind.

The house was built by Rev. John Penniman on a piece of the common land divided in 1707.

Australia Raises Duties on Imports

Canberra, Australia, July 9 (AP)—A deficit of more than £14,000,000 in the revenue of the Australian Commonwealth for the current financial year was disclosed by Premier James Henry Scullin in his budget statement before the House of Representatives today.

The premier announced a heavy increase in internal taxation and a new table of increased import tariffs which he described as the most sensational in the history of the Commonwealth.

Man, 91, Will Meet His Old Teacher, 108

Washington, Conn., July 9 (AP)—The pages of time will be rolled back several scores of years this week when a former pupil, 91, meets his former teacher, 108.

Merritt Haviland of Colora, Md., will arrive here tonight to help his sister, Mrs. Phoebe McMahon, 89, celebrate her birthday and to visit the scenes of his childhood. Among those he will meet is Stanley Warner, now boasting 108 years, who taught Haviland the Three Rs in a country scoolhouse.

Pursued Car in Crash, 2 Dead, 1 Badly Hurt

Yonkers, N. Y., July 9 (AP)—Two men were killed and one was badly injured today when two autos crashed on Bronx River parkway as a motorcycle policeman pursued one of the drivers for speeding.

The dead are Frank Suda, 24, White Plains, and Dominick Yellow, 25, Greenburgh. The injured man is Siegfried Swendsen, 30, of New York, internally injured. Swendsen was charged with homicide and held in a hospital here under $1000 bail.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

Your columns have been the battle ground for a rather wordy struggle centering about the attitude of the young college man entering the business world. May I be permitted to offer a further gratuitous suggestion to the youth about to conquer the universe with no weapon save a be-ribboned diploma?

I am a college man a few years out of the hallowed walls of alma mater. I assaulted the battlements of business with all the fervor of inexperience. I finally landed a job and like countless others of my kind, proceeded to make a great "to do" about my college training.

Never was an opportunity given to express myself but what the collegiate pedigree was brought out for the admiration of onlookers.

As for advice—I never did take that. Fellow employes, no matter how long they had been working at their particular job, could tell me nothing. Hadn't I been to college?

Needless to say I soon lost the job. The next time I took care that my college training was kept a deep dark secret. My progress since then has been fairly rapid.

On the strength of my own experience I would suggest that the first essential for success is to forget that one ever went to college.

Kelly Reviews Work for Dorchester Bay

Editor Boston American:

I believe that the Boston American is interested in the development of Boston Harbor and Dorchester Bay. Since retiring from the House of Representatives I have been trying to secure an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the development of Dorchester Bay and Boston Harbor. Between Andrew sq. and Savin Hill business has fallen off since the opening of the rapid transit and I felt that the business that has been lost could be brought back. I have tried to bring about this improvement because I felt that if Dorchester Bay was dredged to 40 feet it would mean the bringing of business into this section of Dorchester. After I secured the passage of the Old Colony boulevard bill I was interested in the Dorchester Bay.

Several years ago I sent to the late Congressman James A. Gallivan an item asking him to introduce a bill before the committee on harbors and rivers asking for an appropriation of $300,000 for dredging Dorchester Bay up to the Cow pasture, but they only allowed an item of $160,000. Since then I wrote to President Hoover asking him to interest himself and try and secure an appropriation of $1,000,000.

I felt that if he could assert and make such recommendations to the committee on harbors and rivers it would help further the cause that I have been fighting for the past several years. I also wrote a letter to the Hon. David I. Walsh and the Hon. John W. McCormack. Both had send me letters stating what was being done.

I am hoping to see the day that this improvement will be brought about because it will be the means of putting thousands of men to work and bringing back the business that has been lost in this section of Dorchester. Trusting that you will assist, and wishing now to thank the Boston American for its favors in the past. COLEMAN E. KELLY.

The Private Knows Why Germany Dug In

Editor Boston American:

Your article contributed by Gen. Freiderick Von Bernnardi was very carefully read by your interested reader, myself. All I can say is, he must have a very vivid imagination. There is a very old proverb, carried down this generation, which is very appropriate to this very highly militaristic gentleman.

"The wish is father to the thought," and such men as he would have to look for a job, if people like himself were compelled to go into the front lines and dig in for protection.

England and Japan are continually in favor of this article, assailed by this Gen. Von Bernhardi, as being of a very disagreeable nature.

In it he mentions that thousands of Englishmen—I suppose he means British — were scattered dead upon the beaches at Gallipoli and they had bases at Cimbios. I suppose he means Imbros and Genedos. He is wrong again. They were maintained on the peninsula itself.

He says also the technique of trench warfare was highly developed. Who developed it, only the German High Command who he so ably represents. I know the Allies didn't start the trench warfare.

The German army was compelled to dig in France to avoid defeat, just as the Turks were complied to dig in Gallipoli. Gen. Van Bernhardi has still got his German idea of blood and iron policy of Bismarck and I, as a very small member of the Turkish and German fronts, can truthfully say that such articles as written by this man can only inflame and agitate the minds of the people and spoil the good work of President Hoover and his Cabinet. I must add that I enjoy your articles but I am compelled to differ at times with some of them. I think your paper is an excellent medium.

JUST A PRIVATE SOLDIER.

Sees Confusion Regarding Puritans

Editor Boston American:

Is there not some historical confusion in many minds regarding the Puritans? No person can deny that these men were brave, vigorous and eager. But why should we be told that they discovered "liberty" "freedom," etc., in theology or politics. To assert this is to fly in the face of history.

The Puritans hated art, detested harmless games, destroyed the organs in churches, burned beautiful vestments and even did away with Christmas freedom!

They were malcontents in religion. Because the Church of England would not have their theology and social taboo (read the Connecticut Blue Laws) they are to be considered persecuted!

We ought to be fair to the bravery and stout persistance of these men; but why distort history? Matthew Arnold said: "They (the Puritans) led the people of England into the prisonhouse and the key was turned on England's spirit for two centuries." Messrs. H. H. Saunderson and S. E. Morison ought to have a few postscripts!

Sees Prejudice Against Canadian Money

Editor Boston American:

"One of their patrons," also one of your correspondents, speaks of certain porters as receiving "too many Canadian coins of small value."

It is not my intention to comment upon the apparent insinuation that Canadian travelers are not so generous as American travelers. Anyone who now holds this view would be little influenced by anything which I might be able to say in limited space. But one thought struck me as worthy of consideration.

How many traveling from this country into Canada take the trouble to change American money into Canadian before leaving? I, myself, feel it unnecessary to do so. Why? Because Canadian merchants extend to patrons the courtesy of accepting such money at par, even though it very often means to them the loss of the exchange. Consequently, in many places in Canada, especially at those points of entry, it is not unusual to find a large percentage of U. S. money in circulation. The situation here, however, is quite different, as we all know. One with Canadian coins of small denominations finds it most convenient to deposit them in slot machines. It is true that a few stores in this vicinity accept Canadian money at a discount, but for the most, unless the holder of such money acce ts the inconvenience of going to a bank, he stands a poor chance of getting rid of it.

I do not believe that the reason porters receive Canadian money is because of the desire to give them money of lesser value for "generosity, other than Canadian money" measured in terms of U. S. and Canadian dollars, would vary little. I believe that in some way this prejudice against Canadian money should be removed, if only for the convenience of the heavy traffic between the two countries.

Yours truly,

G. A. S.

Wellington Wells, Jr., Takes Miss Virginia Baldwin as His Bride

Miss Virginia Baldwin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Dwight Baldwin of Makawao Maui, Hawaii, and Wellington Wells, Jr., son of Wellington Wells of 171 Bay State rd., were married yesterday afternoon in Baldwin Memorial Chapel in Makawao.

From Boston in the bridal party were Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. P. Kennard, the former as an usher and the latter as one of the bride's attendants; Miss Anne Clifford, also of Boston, a bridesmaid, and Mrs. Baldwin Webster, matron of honor. Richard Cornwall Walker of Maui was best man and the other ushers were Dwight Holbrook Baldwin of Maui and Orville Davies of New York.

The wedding reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Wells will live at 985 Memorial drive after October 1. Before their return to Boston they will go to Alaska on their wedding trip.

The bride studied at Miss Hall's school in Pittsfield and at Miss Garrett's in Paris. Mr. Wells prepared for college at St. Paul's school in Concord, N. H., and entered Harvard with the class of 1931. He belongs to the Phoenix, S. K., Iroquois and Speakers Clubs, and is an editor of the Harvard Advocate.

Niece Identifies Drowning Victim

Lawrence, July 9—Identification of the body of a man found in the South Canal, near the lower locks here yesterday, was identified last night as Patrick Fleming, a 65-year-old mill hand, of 31 Foster st., this city. Identification was made by the man's niece after Boston officials had communicated with the police here to determine whether the description of the man answered that of Oliver B. Garrett.

Another body found in the Merrimack river at Andover this morning could not be identified because of the length of time it had been in the water.

(Ann Arden broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.)

THE ALL WHITE coat is conspicuously fashion right for all daytime summer occasions and the all-white costume is always conspicuous for its charm. The white coat pictured is of wool basket weave material, with deep revers forming a jabot front, and fastened with one large button. The roll collar has a perky little bow at center back. The rough straw hat has a brim of becoming width. The necklace is carved white coral, the bag white silk with prystal handle. White kid pumps and pull-on white washable fabric gloves complete the summertime picture.

WHETHER FOR evening or early morning, it is well to wear white gloves. Pale hands, fashion loves beside the samovar. Sad pun that it is, this statement is very true, for white and very light shades of gloves in six and eight-button lengths are endorsed for teatime wear. White pigskin makes its appearance for sports wear. Doeskin is excellent for the white glove to be worn with the suit and, of course, white in kid or suede is the choice for evening.

NOT THE least of this season's smart fabrications are bags. They appear in the guises of cotton, woolen or silks, and are carried for every hour of night or day. Faille, a fabric which lends itself to formal or tailored treatment, was one of the sensations of the recent French showings. It fashioned any number of the most stunning handbags observed there. Especially worth notice were the three following models:

A BAG suitable for street or more formal afternoon wear uses a clever composition ornament in a shade exactly matching the lining. This bag comes in one of the larger shapes which are currently smart with Parisian women.

THE LAST of the trio uses the ubiquitous prystal for a loop handle, which pulls through the flap in order to fasten.

A course in Tercentenary biography will be presented at the Bright vacation school in Waltham, which will open for the season in the Thomas Hill building, at Main and Heard sts., next Monday, July 14.

Urge New School

In a report to the school committee, William H. Slayton, superintendent of schools in Waltham, urged the construction of a new schoolhouse in the west end of the city to relieve congestion in the grade schools.

Trade Board on Outing

The Roxbury Board of Trade, an organization comprising in its membership Roxbury's leading business men, holds its annual outing at the Hotel Rochmere, in Marblehead, today.

This year the event is in the nature of a Tercentenary celebration, for it may readily be believed that Roxbury was one of the very earliest trading centers of old Boston Town. Harry B. Eaton, of Osgood's Roxbury Store, is general chairman of the committee. Serving with him are: Frankland W. L. Miles, Charles Eliot Worden, Harry Haddock, Morris Elterman, Albert Blank, Donald Brett, Maurice Brody, William Jefferson, Meyer Steinberg, Joseph C. Baxter, William J. Fern and Alvin G. Kenny.

Byrd to Attend Legion Carnival

Ipswich, July 9—Frank Dondero, commander of Post 80, American Legion and also house officer on the night shift at Ipswich police headquarters, announced today that Rear-Admiral Richard Byrd has consented to attend the annual legion carnival, which opens Monday, July 14, on Green st., in the rear of the Shatswell school, to continue for a week.

It was also announced that 30 of the dogs that went to the Antarctic with the Byrd expedition will be on exhibition on the final day of the carnival.

$26,000,000 for France's Defenses

Paris, July 9 (AP)—The finance commission of the Chamber of Deputies today voted, 15 to 5, to recommend the government bill for $26,000,000 additional appropriation for guns and ammunition to strengthen frontier defenses.

Furniture Storage Swept by Blaze

Damage of $15,200 was caused by fire and water to the furniture storehouse of James Bloomberg, Second st., Chelsea, last night. The blaze, of undetermined origin, started in the second floor of the two-story wooden building and set off automatic sprinklers. Most of the damage done to the expensive furniture was caused by water.

5000 Baptist Young People in Convention

San Francisco, July 9 (AP)—Approximately 5000 delegates were here today to attend the 39th annual convention of the Baptist Young People's Union of America. The delegates represent nearly every State in the Union and Canada.

DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 140

A PINE DRESSING table, with one long drawer and two smaller ones, is one of the valued antiques owned by Mrs. Mabel S. Dyer, of 32 Elm st., Somerville. It was owned by Mrs. Dyer's relatives in Framingham for more than 75 years. The table came into Mrs. Dyer's possession some time ago.

Shoes can be comfortable

But their martyrdom is more pathetic than heroic because it is so unnecessary.

There is a shoe—the Arch Preserver Shoe—that absolutely gives foot comfort with the utmost style and grace.

Thousands of women know this from experience. If you have not already learned it, try a pair of Arch Preserver Shoes today.

"Clothes can help you to gain a more feminine psychology about yourself"

BEATRICE FAIRFAX ANSWERS

an intimate Letter . . .

BOSTON
Girl

EMMELINE P—(her friends call her "Bobbie") writes me a very intimate letter from which I quote:

> "My trouble is that I'm 'just a good pal' to men. They like me but they don't fall in love with me, and yet, like every girl, I want romance . . ."

Bobbie dear, it is the feminine quality in yourself which you have hidden under a hail-fellow-well-met attitude, that you must release, because it is a natural law that men should seek out the womanly woman.

Clothes can help you to gain a more feminine psychology about yourself, Bobbie.

For instance, and this advice is for every girl, when you wear exquisitely colorful, lacy lingerie and negligees, you feel feminine and charming. This consciousness of feminine charm casts its subtle spell. You believe in yourself—and confidence is contagious.

Of course you must keep the wonderful colors, the soft lustre, of your lingerie always lovely.

This is not as difficult as some women think. You need have no fear that frequent washing will rob your dainty lingerie of its beauty, for there is a marvelous product—which so many know—especially made to keep delicate colors and fabrics alluring. Of course I mean Lux. With it, your pretty lingerie, your sheer hosiery, negligees, all retain the full beauty and charm of color. And they last surprisingly long.

Charm in Your Home, Too

It is important, too, that your home should always seem dainty and charming. Keep the glamour of lovely fresh color in everything about the house, for men love cheerful color. Curtains, linens, spreads, cushion covers, all retain color charm with Lux. Beatrice Fairfax

British Admiralty Asks $1,000,000 for New Ships

London, July 9 (AP)—The Admiralty today published additional estimates for naval construction for the current financial year in which £208,200 (about $1,000,000) is asked. The amount will be used for construction allowed Great Britain under the London treaty.

Of the supplementary estimate £182,600 is required to meet the costs to be incurred this fiscal year on three submarines of the 1929 program, construction of which had been deferred pending conclusion of the naval treaty.

Looks Young, Feels Fine

"Eight years ago before my last baby was born, I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got such good results that I named her Catherine Lydia. I have six older children and five grandchildren, too. I am 44, but people tell me I look much younger. I am now taking the Vegetable Compound again because of my age. I eat and sleep better and I do all my housework, and my washing. I will do my best to answer letters."—Mrs. H. Dolhonde, 6318 York St., New Orleans, Louisiana.

QUINCY CLUBS TO MAKE TOUR OF SHRINES

By NANCY BREWSTER

Four distinguished Massachusetts women have been invited to be the guests of the Quincy City Federation of Women's Clubs, through its special tercentenary committee, on a visit of the historic shrines of the city next week when Quincy observes is tercentenary celebration.

They are Mrs. Frank G. Allen, Mrs. William S. Youngman, Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall and Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon, and should the women say "yes" to the biddings they will be personally escorted through Quincy by clubwomen and taken to those landmarks for which the South Shore city has become famous.

The Federation's tercentenary committiee has charge of the information bureau to direct visitors to historic shrines, and on next Wednesday, July 16, they will act as special hostesses to the four Bay State invited guests. A reception and tea at the lovely clubhouse will bring to a close the delightful afternoon planned by the Federation in their honor.

Mrs. Franklin S. Nichols, Federation president, will do the official honors.

To date about 75 women have volunteered to act as guides along the route from Neponset bridge to the various shrines during the week as the Federation's contribution to the city's celebration and program. The women, who are affiliated with the federated clubs and church organization of Quincy, will be distinguished by badges, and about 150 Girl Scouts, who will serve in a similar capacity, will wear arm badges.

On Friday morning at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce rooms arrangements will be completed and the historical pilgrimage will be decided upon.

Statler Clubrooms Open All Summer for Tired Visitors

The Hotel Statler clubrooms of the Professional Women's Club are open during the summer and while club hostesses are not there to welcome visiting clubwomen, the rooms offer much in the way of rest and surcease from the hot outdoors.

I wandered in there yesterday but found no one. Only a few notices on the bulletin board informing who of the membership who came that Mrs. May C. Howard is clubroom chairman; Miss Nan Gurney, treasurer is receiving funds at 18 Huntington ave.; Mrs. H. Frances Hardy, finance chairman, to whose home at 83 Common st., Watertown, bills should be sent; Mrs. Charles F. Getteny, flower chairman; and Mrs. Guy E. Putnam, printing chairman.

Mrs. Mabel Mann Jordan, president of the club, can be reached at Randolph until October, the bulletin also informed.

Mrs. Mary G. Reed Will Sail July 16 for Tour of Europe

An itinerary of England, Holland, Germany, Bavaria, Switzerland, Italy and France has been arranged by Mrs. Mary G. Reed, past president of the Massachusetts Federation of Music Clubs, with special plans for a visit to Oberammergau and the Passion Play.

Mrs. Reed announces the sailing date as July 16 from New York on the S. S. Leviathan with a scheduled return for September 3.

Cape Presidents Will Be Guests of the Second District

At the September 16 Presidents' conference at Plymouth, the first district presidents from "way down on the Cape" with Mrs. Ralph H. Snow of Harwichport, director, will be the guests of the second district, Mrs. George E. Gomley, director, presiding.

Mrs. Amos A. Handy of the Plymouth Woman's Club, as hostess president, will welcome the clubwomen.

Mrs. Arthur Rotch to Have Charge of Vote Questionnaire

The questionnaire which will be published before the primary election which comes September 16 is to be in charge of Mrs. Arthur G. Rotch, first vice-president of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, announcement comes from headquarters.

Candidates for public office will again this year be questioned by the league before the primary, the State organization to question candidates for governor and the United States Senate, local leagues, the district candidates.

Ex-Tennis Champion to Wed Society Girl

New York, July 9 (INS)—R. Norris Williams, 2d, former national lawn tennis champion, World War veteran and member of a socially prominent family, today visited the municipal building with Miss Frances W. Gillmore, society girl, and took out a license to be married.

Miss Gillmore is the daughter of Maj.-Gen. and Mrs. Quincy Adams Gillmore. Williams, a brilliant tennis star at Harvard before he won the national championship in 1914 from Maurice McLaughlin, is 38, and a broker.

'Gas' Cut to 8 Cents in Bitter Price War

San Francisco, July 9 (AP)—While gasoline prices ranged from 8 to 14 cents a gallon on the Pacific coast today, rumors indicated the price slashing was a fight to the finish with the extermination of weaker retailers as a possibility.

Tacoma motorists were buying gasoline at 8 cents, at Los Angeles it sold at 10 cents, Seattle at 11 to 13 cents with similar prices here.

Oil company officials admitted the "war" was the most serious ever faced on the Pacific coast. An independent dealers' association here asked Governor Young to class oil companies and gasoline distributors as public utilities under jurisdiction of the state railroad commission.

Herbert H. McMillan, vice-president of the McMillan Petroleum Company, announced he would ask for federal intervention, charging the Clayton act was being violated.

FULL FREEDOM FOR INDIAN PARLEY

Simla, India, July 9 (AP)—Viceroy Lord Irwin, addressing both houses of the Indian legislature this afternoon, declared that after careful consideration His Majesty's government had decided that the forthcoming round table conference in London on Indian constitutional questions would enjoy full freedom of action.

The conference, the viceroy said, would, in accordance with a previous statement made last Nov. 1, be free to approach its task greatly assisted by, but with its liberty unimpaired the report of the Simon Statutory Commission.

The viceroy said that it was clear from such definition that the government conceived the conference as a joint assembly of representatives of both countries and that the government hoped all schools of Indian thought would be ready to share in this constructive work.

The viceroy described the Simon report as a "weighty constructive contribution to a most difficult problem," but said that it was neither the desire nor the function of the commission to anticipate decisions of the government reached after conference with representatives from India or parliament itself.

Mountains 500 Miles Away Seen in Mirage

Cleveland, July 9 (AP)—Clevelanders who turned their eyes northward were able to view the Watchist mountains, between 450 and 500 miles away across Lake Erie and the southern tip of Ontario, for more than an hour yesterday.

Rev. F. L. Odenbach, seismologist and astronomer of John Carroll University, said a mirage made the mountains, in the Georgian Bay territory, visible here.

Taunton Woman Ends Battle of Snakes With Her Axe

Taunton, Mass., July 9 (AP)—When Mrs. Joseph Clothier, cottager on the shores of Lake Sabbatia, stepped into her yard this morning she saw two five-foot snakes in mortal combat.

One, a black adder, appeared to be getting the better of the other, a water snake. Mrs. Clothier got an axe and quickly beheaded the adder.

The other snake, apparently fatally injured, disappeared into the water. The adder measured five feet three inches, and Mrs. Clothier said the water snake was not much smaller.

Gene Sarazen Says Jones Has Fine Chance in Open

By GENE SARAZEN

Former National Open and American Professional Champion

Minneapolis, July 9 (US)—Practice rambles over Interlachen's fairly flat course have convinced me that only a robust hitter will win the national open championship here this week.

The booming shots of Bobby Jones ought to adapt themselves readily to fairways that possess plenty of length. If the fates have conspired to give the Georgian a monopoly of golf honors this year, they couldn't have provided a happier hunting ground for his third triumph.

But do not get the idea that Interlachen is a setup for Jones. Bob's performances are too brilliant not to take them in full seriousness. We all realize that he is the man we must pass if we are to enjoy the fruits of victory.

He beat us at Winged Foot. He was in the playoff against Johnny Farrell at Olympia Fields. He won at Scioto in 1926. Lost in the playoff to Willie MacFarlane at Worcester the year before. Was close to the top at Oakland Hills in 1924 and was first at Inwood in 1923. Yes, he's always up there. But I have a hunch he is doomed for a licking this time.

Pro Golfers on Edge for Title Play

Too many of the professionals are razor keen for this event, and they know that Jones is keen, also. He wants to win more than at any time in his career. Sometimes when a man wants to win so badly, things do not break right for him.

The old idea that Jones played the game just for the fun there was in it is no longer believed. He is just as serious as any of us.

If Jones gets to hooking his woods at Interlachen, he will shed many tears. The rough just off the fairways is unfairly tough.

If you wander far off the fairways, the trouble you meet up with is not half as bad as that which lurks a foot or two off line.

Diegel-Horton Smith Should Play Well

There are several other players besides Jones who will revel in the conditions at Interlachen. Leo Diegel, with his prodigious hitting, ought to go great. Horton Smith is another who should keep close to the top.

I like the links myself. I am hitting my wood shots great distances, and the steel-shafted irons that have replaced the hickory are just what I have been looking for for years. I don't think I ever stroked the ball more freely and confidently than I am right now.

Interlachen is the hardest test we've had since Oakmont. The winning score may possibly go as low as 295, but I think it will go closer to 298. An average of 74 for the four rounds under the prevailing conditions should come pretty close to bringing home the silverware.

Putting will have as much to do with high scoring as any other factor. The greens are not good. They may be a little more serviceable by championship time, but I am not sanguine about the prospect. The fairways, however, are in splendid condition. There will be no complaints about poor lies.

Sid Terris on Verge of K. O.

New York, July 9 (INS)—Sid Terris, the East Side ghost, was suffering from one of the most severe beatings of his life today. He was all but knocked out by Pete Nebo, Seminole Indian lightweight, last night, but managed to stick the ten rounds. Terris was knocked down three times in the first round.

Diamond Pick-Ups

Tommy Connolly tried to make Geisel and Campbell look as good as possible yesterday, but it was a waste of time. Nobody could make that pair anything but terrible.

Big Fred "Firpo" Marberry wasn't due to work for the Senators in the second game but unless he sees action once every three or four days, he grows stale, so he has to be used out of turn.

Nick Altrock, famous Washington comedian, is anything but humorous on the bench when the Senators are trailing. He's a clown in public, but a mighty smart baseball man behind the scenes.

Incidentally, Nick and his partner in fun, Al Schacht announce that they will stage the Sharkey-Schmeling fight between the games this p. m. That ought to be good.

President Bob Quinn is in Chicago to attend the first mid-season joint meeting ever held. The magnates are going to discuss the draft. If they are smart, they will discuss umpires, too.

Sam Rice certainly got a break when he flied to Webb in the fifth. The sun was clouded when the ball left the bat, but appeared in all its brilliance while Webb was waiting for the agate to come down and he lost it completely. Rice reached third and later scored a very cheap run, and the visitors won by just that margin.

Maybe Bob Quinn will bring those Indianapolis stars he is going to get back with him when he returns from the West.

The Sox have made five home runs since last Saturday and each of them came with the bases empty. That's the kind of tough breaks a lowly club gets.

Samuel isn't an especially common name, yet the Senators have three players who boast of it, Rice, West and Jones.

"Pete" Bowen Beats Two German Stars

Berlin, July 9 (AP)—"Pete" Bowen of the University of Pittsburgh, member of the touring American track and field team, beat Engelhardt and Kugelberg of Germany in a 400-meter race today. Bowen was clocked at 49 seconds flat.

Engelhardt was second and Kugelberg third, behind the national collegiate quarter-mile champion of the United States. Bowen was timed at 35.2 seconds for the first 300 meters.

New Horses at Latonia

Latonia, Ky., July 9—A shipment arriving here included four head which J. Robinson is training for M. J. Whalen, three of H. W. Miller, one of A. Dunlap, one of T. L. Palmquist and two of M. Ayers.

Rosenbloom to Give Up Title

New York, July 9 (INS)—Maxie Rosenbloom, newly-crowned world's light heavyweight champion, intends to ask the New York commission to permit him to relinquish the title, it was reported today. Rosenbloom planned to take this step because he said he could not sign up for fights while champion as readily as when merely a contender.

He plans to give up the title and fight as a heavyweight, the New York Commission having, refused him permission to fight heavyweights while holding the light heavyweight title, he said.

"Saints" Conquer South Boston Nine

Saint Peter and Paul Holy Name Society defeated the South Boston Badgers, 15 to 4, in a game played at Columbus park, South Boston, yesterday. Adley featured for the winners, making a home run and a single.

JACK CONWAY REVEALS EVILS WHICH THREATEN TO CRUSH RING GAME

BY JACK CONWAY

The boxing game is tottering on the edge of the precipice.

It is being pushed into disrepute and oblivion by racketeers, politically controlled boxing commissions, crooked fighters, conniving managers, money-mad promoters, gamblers and other sinister influences.

Drastic and honest action is necessary if the boxing game is to be saved.

BIG MEN ARE NEEDED

Boxing is today much in the same position that baseball was following the Black Sox scandal. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis and Babe Ruth erased from the memory of the American public the disgraceful betrayal of baseball by a handful of players who sold out to a group of gamblers.

Jack Conway

The men back of baseball proved bigger than those selfish individuals who would have crushed the national pastime.

Boxing today stands in need of some person or group with sufficient power and courage to drive out those persons who are a detriment to the game.

It will require a big stick to eliminate the scheming manager, who will resort to any means to win; the chicken-hearted fighter, who will not enter a ring unless his opponent's hands are tied; the grafting politicians, who grow prosperous as a result of their control of boxing commissions, and the sunken-eyed gamblers, who will bleed boxing or any other branch of athletics if by so doing they can enrich themselves.

PUBLIC IN REVOLT

The public is today in revolt against the conditions in the boxing game. It refuses to give its full support to the ring until present evils are eliminated.

Dwindling gate receipts at boxing shows in various parts of the country should be a warning to those interested in the future of the so-called manly art of self-defense. Most boxing clubs are operating at a loss. The fans are staying away from the various shows. This is the only way they can show their disapproval and disgust of present conditions.

Boston and all New England has fallen under the boxing blight. The promoters are at a loss to arrange shows which appeal to the public.

In Massachusetts Governor Frank G. Allen and the Legislature have named a special committee which will delve into boxing to see if a cure can be found for existing evils.

Massachusetts has at least been fortunate in having a boxing commission which has not been controlled by any political group. In this respect its commission is different from those of most other states.

No Massachusetts governor, from Coolidge to Allen, has allowed anybody to tell the boxing commission how to act.

The Massachusetts Boxing Commission functions as a part of the Department of Public Safety. It should be a separate body by itself. A limitation of the number of commissions by the State constitution is the reason for this condition.

Inefficient referees and judges have added to the confusion of the boxing game. The public has at times looked with suspicion upon some of the weird rulings which have been made in important ring contests.

REFEREES POORLY PAID

Ridiculously low fees for services have subjected boxing officials to hardships. It has been said that a man's services measures up to the amount of compensation he receives.

Boxing referees average less than $50 a bout, while they don't receive more than $200 even when the gate receipts top $1,000,000 and a victory for one of the main bout performers means a fortune.

The position of ring officials should carry a certain amount of dignity and also proper compensation.

Even amateur boxing has felt the inroads of the racketeers and sure-thing promoters. They have organized their "amateur" clubs, got rich on the efforts of boys and made all the necessary short cuts to assure large houses and a snug profit.

The A. A. U. has been a cloak which has served the purpose of individuals eager to get outside of the jurisdiction of the boxing commission. Some of the "amateur" clubs have been more harsh in their dealings than the professional organizations, which are supposed to be without heart or soul.

Gamblers have their own sections at boxing shows. They shout their prices like bidders at a public auction. They attempt to intimidate ring officials and start demonstrations when the tide of battle in a ring contest turns against the money they have wagered on the result.

HOME OF BOXING

Wild disorders have recently occurred in New Jersey rings. They were inspired and carried out by men who recognize no authority. They took offense because their efforts were frustrated because officials refused to be intimidated.

Despite all these abuses, boxing has managed to survive. But the game has its limits when it comes to taking punishment. Outside authorities will take action if those persons closely identified with boxing fail to do so.

College Court Champion in Longwood Bowl Tourney

FIELD IN PLAY IS LIMITED THIS YEAR

One of the best tennis tourneys ever conducted at the Longwood Cricket Club will be staged next week, when the foremost courtmen now in the United States meet to battle for the Longwood Bowl.

The Davis Cup matches in Europe have drawn a number of the top flight stars out of the country, but for this reason competition is expected to be closer than ever, with evenly balanced groups competing.

Clifford Sutter of Tulane, intercollegiate tennis title holder, has entered the tourney and is one of the favorites in the play. He is a good all-around player, and now is at the top of his game.

The field this year is limited, only 64 players being allowed to compete for the coveted trophy. First and second rounds of the Bowl play are to be three-set matches. After that the survivors will clash through five-set frays.

Another feature at Longwood next week is the invitation women's singles play. Midge Gladman, California, probably will be in this tourney. She should get real opposition from Marjorie Morrill of Dedham among others. Miss Morrill has been going better than ever this season.

S. Boston-St. John Game Is Postponed

St. John, N. B., July 9—Thunder showers at a late hour yesterday caused postponement of the initial contest between South Boston and St. John.

The Southies were opening a five-game series here, one extra fixture being added as an attraction play-off of a deferred game in Boston.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Bobby Jones is primed to defend his United States open title at Interlachen. In spite of the intense heat, Bobby has already shown that he is master of the Minneapolis layout.

Doubtless, he will get off to one of his sensational starts tomorrow which will cause many of his adversaries to tighten.

In all championships in which Bobby Jones is competing, the field, with few exceptions, makes the fatal mistake of playing Jones instead of concentrating upon their own games. Every player is anxious at all times to know how Bobby is going but when the perennial champion is having some tough sledding, his foes are unable to take advantage of their chance to make up lost ground.

In all probability some unknown will finish during the first round at Interlachen tomorrow and after sleeping on his new gained fame will fade out of the picture on Thursday, never to be heard from again, at least as far as this championship is concerned.

There is no championship in which experience is a greater asset than a United States open. Even in the cases of Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Horton Smith, Leo Diegel, Johnny Farrell, Gene Sarazen and all of the leading lights of the game, the mental strain is terrific. What must it be to the unknowns, who are at the end of the first or second round, who find themselves out in front of the much advertised stars?

The four N. E. P. G. O. members who will play in the open, Bobby Crowley of Kenoza, Charlie MacAndrews of Bonnet Shores, Jack Curley of Stoney Brae and Teddy Turner of North Adams, will cover themselves with glory if they qualify for the final rounds.

After serving as president, chairman of the house and greens committee of the Blue Hill Country Club for many years, George Capen has resigned as an official of the Canton club because of pressure of business. Benjamin Morse was elected to serve as president at the last directors' meeting of the Blue Hill Country Club.

There is no club in this vicinity that can boast of better tees and greens than Blue Hill. There will be a rush for memberships to Blue Hill as soon as the new six holes and new clubhouse are completed.

And, while on Blue Hill, John Ford, who is the professional, turned in three fine rounds of 72—70—72 last week. On his 70 round, John needed two fours for a 68 but the thought of such an accomplishment proved too much of a burden and a gulp at the 17th and another at the home hole cost John two strokes.

Although Jim Baldwin, captain elect of the Harvard team, and John Merwin of Yale look like the strongest combination in the Winchester invitation, the Concord pair are going to meet with some strong competition, from such teams as Chet Rich and Fran Hersey, Wellesley; Elmer Ward and Eddie Maher, Norfolk; Lewis Grimball, Belmont, and Don Connors, Winchester; Gerard Moore and Bill Donnelly, Woodland; Herman Goldberger and John Barbour and Jimmie Travers and Nelson James.

Evidently Buck Ewing, the old-time Roxbury high all-around athlete, must be getting along in years, for he has taken up golf. Buck is a member at Blue Hill and is keeping in shape by getting in his round a day.

TITLE GOLF PLAY WILL GO ON AIR

The national open golf tournament at Minneapolis this week will be broadcast by Ted Husing, Columbia Broadcasting System announcer, by means of a knapsack transmitter strapped to his back, which enables him to follow and describe the play stroke by stroke.

The aerial is a brass pipe two feet long which protrudes from the carrying case.

Receiving equipment located at three pickup stations on the course will catch Husing's description and relay it by wire to Station WCCO, Minneapolis link in the Columbia chain, and thence over the network. A special license to operate has been issued to the Columbia System by the Federal Radio Commission.

This transmitter is the result of months of research work by the Columbia engineering department, which sought to produce equipment that would be easily portable, light of weight and efficient under all conditions.

The complete transmitter is mounted in a case approximately 15 inches square by 10 inches deep. It is self-contained and weighs about 18 pounds.

In actual operation it is strapped to the announcer's back permitting him to move about at will. His movements do not disturb the emitted wave nor cause fading, nor can he throw the transmitter out of oscillation.

A special light weight microphone may be held in the hand or mounted on the announcer's chest, allowing him free use of both hands.

EARL SANDE

The first race horse he ever saw was hitched to the tailboard of a prairie schooner. Two years later, every track in America resounded to that famous cry, "C'm on Sande!"

He always gave the public the best run for its money.

That's the reason, too, for OLD GOLD rooters. That's why, in four short years, OLD GOLD has scrambled past the pack . . . caught the leaders . . . and is thundering down the stretch. OLD GOLD, too, always gives the public a run for its money.

Made of nature-blessed tobaccos, it offers you the taste-thrill you've always longed for . . . it eliminates the throat-hack you've always hated.

Explain Sande or OLD GOLD? Sandes and OLD GOLDS are born, not made.

IT WAS JUST TWO YEARS AFTER HE SAW HIS FIRST RACE HORSE THAT SANDE WAS CROWNED "EARL" OF AMERICAN JOCKEYS.

HERSEY AND RICH CLOSE SECOND

By BILL GRIMES

With about 50 teams accounted for, Bill Donnolly, the State junior champion, and his Woodland partner, Gerard Moore, were leading the field in the qualifying round of the annual Winchester Country Club four-ball invitation with a 71.

Two strokes behind Donnolly and Moore was Chet Rich and Francis Hersey of Wellesley. Only five other teams of the early starters broke 80.

Moore and Donnolly were out in 35 and came home in 36 for their 71. Donnolly ran down a nice putt on the first green for a 4, but Moore came in with par figures at the second and third hole, but after Donnolly had dropped a nice putt for a 4at the fourth, Moore 3 putted the fifth and came back with a nice putt at the sixth after he had missed the green from the tee.

Donnolly got a 4 at the seventh, where he dropped another nice putt, and then Moore chipped in from the edge of the eighth green for an eagle 3, after he had played a sensational second shot from behind a tree.

Moore missed a short putt for a deuce at the ninth and they were out in 35. After getting their pars at the 10th and 11th, Moore curled in long pull for a birdie at the 12th and another one putt green got the Woodland boys a three at the short 14th after Moore had parred the long 13th.

From the 13th to the 17th they played par golf but Donnolly missed a short putt which would have given them a 70 at the home hole.

INSIDE STORY OF RING GAME

ne gains no place else as he sees two perfectly conditioned athletes sweep into action in the ring, their bodies perfectly conditioned, their eyes keen, their minds alert.

WHAT PUBLIC WANTS

The public insists on the same honest effort in boxing it receives when two college football teams clash. It intends to see that the contestants give their best efforts, that the sinister forces are driven out and that boxing is conducted as a sport and not as a big business interested only in profits.

If this is not done the public will count boxing out.

The public remains indifferent to numerous evils over a period of years. It finally awakens and acts quickly, sometimes severely. An aroused public is a dangerous thing with which to trifle.

The public has a particular interest in boxing as it likes the game when it is conducted under the right conditions. It will use its big stick to drive the sinister influences out.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American, Jack Conway will have another article on "The Inside Story of the Boxing Racket." Watch for it.

OVER THE PLATE

By JOE CASHMAN

Major league clubs reach the half way mark in the pennant races this week with Washington, Philadelphia and New York still staging a great fight for honors in the American loop and Brooklyn, Chicago, New York and St. Louis waging a merry battle for leadership in the senior circuit.

How different the situation was a year back!

At that time, the Athletics had the American League championship as good as won, and the Cubs had only the Pittsburgh Pirates to worry about.

All the present contenders, with the possible exception of the Cardinals, figure to remain in the flag hunt right down to the finish, and the A's and Cubs, top heavy favorites to repeat at the start of the race, aren't any better than even-money choices to win at this writing.

For coasting to a pennant, as each did last campaign, and overcoming the stiffest sort of opposition all the way, as each figures to be forced to do this season to win, are two very different tasks, and neither defender has yet proved capable of the latter.

The two most improved clubs in the game up to date are Washington and Brooklyn. Neither was ever dangerous last year; both have been at or near the top since the bell rang this year, and promise to remain there for the rest of the way as they have plenty of class.

Other improved clubs are the Cardinals and Braves.

VETERANS WITH CARDS

The St. Louis outfit is composed of the oldest gang of ball players in either league and is representing the toughest baseball town in the country.

It showed nothing last year and ought to have been worse this season. Instead, it has laughed at Father Time and played the best ball of any team in the circuit, except for one long losing streak.

If more than 1000 fans ever turned out to watch the Cards at home, they might crush all opposition and win their third pennant in five years.

Scant attention has been paid to the Braves outside of the Hub, but the fact remains that Bill McKechnie has performed miracles with the team.

With practically the same players that finished deep in the cellar in '29 and was picked to finish even deeper this season, he has had the Tribe in or near the first division and close to the .500 mark from the beginning.

TRIBE IS DANGEROUS

A little more strength and Mister McKechnie would have all the boys worried.

The biggest flops of the season thus far are the Phillies, Tigers and Browns.

The Phils blasted their way to fifth place last season and great things were expected of them this year, but they have been unable to keep out of the depths. No club has a stronger attack, but the pitching is lacking.

The other clubs are no better nor worse than they were a year back.

When fans take the time and trouble to write to newspapers concerning the poor work of umpires, you can set it down that said "umps" must be very bad.

Here's a letter we received from a feminine fan who saw Harry Geisel and Dick Campbell show how not to umpire at Braves Field on Sunday last:

Thank Heavens one of our sport writers has the courage of his convictions! That was some article that you wrote about the umpires. More power to you. Reading between the lines of some of the other articles about that robbery at Braves Field, one could guess what the writers would like to have written, but did not have the nerve!

I saw that game and if I ever felt like committing a murder, that was the time. As one sport fan to another, don't you think that there should be some ruling against letting umpires stay in the game when they start giving such decisions?

If a few more writers had your idea on the matter, maybe something could be done about it. Fans pay to see a good, clean, fair game, and want to get one. Thanks a lot for helping us out.

JUST A FEMININE FAN.

Uebele Shoots 60; Claims Golf Mark

Indianapolis, July 9 (AP)—Herman Uebele, professional at the Pleasant Run Golf Club here, today claimed a new world's record for 18 holes on the difficult Pleasant Run course, boasting a score of 60, and a record of one eagle, 11 birdies and an even par on the other six holes.

Although a score of 55 was once made by George Duncan on a short Swiss course, Uebele's score, made late yesterday, was believed to be a world's record for links spread out over 6044 yards. The score was 13 under par. Uebele played in a foursome.

Sammy Fuller Meets Lynch on Monday

Sammy Fuller, the Pancho Villa of the North End, and Billy Lynch of Providence will clash in the most important bout ever held in Southern New England at the Marks Stadium, Tiverton, R. I., next Monday night.

Additional importance was given the bout yesterday when it was announced that the winner would box either Andy Callahan or Dick Honeyboy Finnegan.

STABLE MATES FINISH 1-2

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., July 9 (US)—Gifford A. Cochrane was presented with the Fleetwing Handicap yesterday at Empire City. His pair, the Beasel and Flying Heels, coasted across the line, ace-deuce, and thereby grabbed $4170 for the millionaire owner.

Cochrane was the principal one to benefit for the pair was a 2 to 7 favorite and only the wealthy and the foolish class played the entry.

For a time there was quite a lot of talk around as Eaby, the rider of Bud Broom, which finished third, made a claim of foul. But it was not allowed.

Uncle Henry McDaniel, the Cochrane trainer, declared the Beasel and he did. In the last 50 yards the jockey had a strangle hold on Flying Heels to prevent him from skidding home in front. This sagacious move saved Flying Heels from being plastered with a penalty for winning.

Big League Magnates Convene

Chicago, July 9 (INS)—Discussion of the draft rule and other matters pertaining to their relations with minor leagues occupied representatives of American and National League club owners today

A special committee appointed last December to investigate means of improving the present draft method will make its report.

BOSTON YACHT CLUB FLEET IN LONG SAIL

Nantucket, July 9—The Boston Yacht Club fleet dropped anchor in Nantucket harbor at one bell yesterday after a run from Edgartown.

Near the finish the wind veered to the southwest, but held its pitch. The fleet of more than 30 power and sail yachts got under way from Edgartown.

Commodore William W. Nichols' black sloop Marigold was first across the finish line, followed by the Indra, and the rest of the squadron closely bunched. The power craft brought up as the rear guard.

Over 7,500 cigar factories are registered by the U. S. Government. Over 7,400 of these hand-roll cigars, producing 50 percent of the output. Every hand-rolled cigar—made by American Cigar Co. or anyone else—is subject to the possible danger of "spit-tipping." Certified Cremo is absolutely free from spit-tipping—No Cremo is made by hand.

Certified Cremo is a really wonderful smoke—mild—mellow—nut-sweet! GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

One satisfying factor about making mental changes in golf is that they come to you so much more easily than will improvement as a result of struggling with clubs. Each mental development is a permanent improvement and one that improves all your golfing while, as you doubtless know, to change from one mechanical principle to another often only aggravates things and confounds you more. Now also it is next to impossible to make mechanical changes quickly, and golfers everywhere suffer from the fault of trying at once to change from things they are accustomed to in swinging to new principles. But the mental change is different.

Schaaf to Battle Risko in Philly Ring

Ernie Schaaf and Johnny Risko of Cleveland will meet for the third time on July 30 in the Sesquicentennial Stadium in Philadelphia.

Schaaf won a decision over Risko in a Boston bout some time ago. Later the pair met in Cleveland, Risko's home city, and the Baker Boy won a questionable decision over Schaaf.

Schaaf hopes for victory over Risko, as such a win would help the gate of the Schaaf-Maloney fight in September in Boston.

West Newton Girl Is Fine Golf Prospect

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

With two golfing titles to her credit at the age of 17, and with a style that is praised by the experts, Miss Dorothy Hunter of West Newton promises to blossom into another Glenna Collett before many years pass.

"A year ago her name first became known in golfing circles when she won the women's championship of Hawaii where she was living at the time with her dad, Capt. Robert C. Hunter of the U. S. Engineering Corps.

Little was heard of Dorothy after her victory in the land of the pineapple until one week ago when she blazed her way to victory in the Massachusetts Girls' golfing championship at Oakley, and, in so doing, broke the course record for women.

Miss Hunter Likely to Seek U. S. Titles

Having proved her ability in two title tourneys, and displaying the form and temperament of a champion in both, the followers of golf are wondering just how much further Miss Hunter will go along the trail.

It seems reasonable to expect that Miss Hunter has started on the road to high golfing honors and will soon land. She loves the game and plays it whenever she has the time. She is a student at Newton high school but can be found at the Albemarle Golf Club, her home course, when not studying.

Dorothy very modestly gives credit for her surge to links fame to her dad and to Billy Duffy, the pro at Albemarle. Capt. Hunter claims that he has had little to do with his daughter's success and that the laurels go to Duffy. But both have had a hand in the modelling of the new girls' champion.

Capt. Hunter keeps up his daughter's interest in the game. He gave her enough pointers to win the championship of Hawaii. Billy Duffy has since taken charge and groomed her for her latest title acquisition.

Duffy feels that Miss Hunter is going a long way in the golf game. She is quick to learn, has the instinct and the innate ability, according to Duffy. And that's about a necessity.

More will be heard from Miss Dorothy Hunter this summer. And, unless all present signs are [illegible] also be [illegible] in the national women's golf before she has reached her first milestone.

R. N. WILLIAMS TO BE MARRIED

New York, July 9 (AP)—Richard N. Williams, former national tennis singles and doubles champion, and Frances W. Gillmore of New York, obtained a marriage license at the Municipal building today. They are to be married sometime this month.

Mr. Williams, who gave his age as 38 and his birthplace as Switzerland, was one of America's outstanding tennis players in the days of "Red Mack" McLoughlin.

He held the national doubles championship with Vincent Richards in 1926 and was a star of the Davis Cup matches in 1921, 1925 and 1926. He is now America's eleventh ranking player. This is his second marriage, his first wife having died in April, 1929.

Orleans Defeats Falmouth Nine

Orleans, July 9—Orleans came from behind in the eighth inning to beat Falmouth, 9 to 7, in a Cape Cod League game played here at Eldridge field.

The four runs in the eighth, two to tie and two to win, were the results of four hits, a walk and a fatal error, which came after two were out.

GLIDER FLIERS ELIGIBLE FOR LICENSE

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Indications that the art of gliding is receiving official recognition from the aeronautic industry and federal government are contained in a dispatch received here.

To date no method of licensing the powerless planes has been evolved, the gliders flying on their own right. The aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce, rulers of things that fly in this country, has issued a series of regulations under which gliders may be licensed.

The regulations include gliders built prior to October 1, 1930, regardless of design and manufacture.

Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics, in making known the new regulation, stated that the policy of the department is to contribute to the growth of commercial aviation and the regulation for gliders are considered by him to be very liberal, and one which should not handicap the growth of the sport.

"After October 1, 1930," Mr. Young said, "additional gliders which fall under the following two classes will be eligible for license.

"1 (a) Gliders manufactured under Approved Type Certificates. This corresponds to the present procedure involving the licensing of airplanes which are built under Approved Type Certificates. (b) Gliders constructed by anyone provided they are built in accordance with specifications and design, previously approved by the Department of Commerce.

"2 Gliders not manufactured under Approved Type Certificates, but which meet the requirements for such a certificate.

Bandit Employs 'Supers,' Holds Up Bank for $750

Los Angeles, July 9 (AP)—A bandit with a flair for showmanship moved his company into the lobby of the First National Bank of Artesia yesterday and staged a performance for which he exacted a fee of $750.

"I have a gun on you. Five men within and three outside," read a note he handed the cashier. "Hand me all the money you have. My men will stay here for half an hour after I leave."

The robber took $750 and departed. The men stood in silence about the bank until police arrived.

"He hired us at an employment agency to work on a ranch," the leader explained when informed he had been an accomplice in a bank robbery. "He told us to follow him to the bank where he would get payroll money."

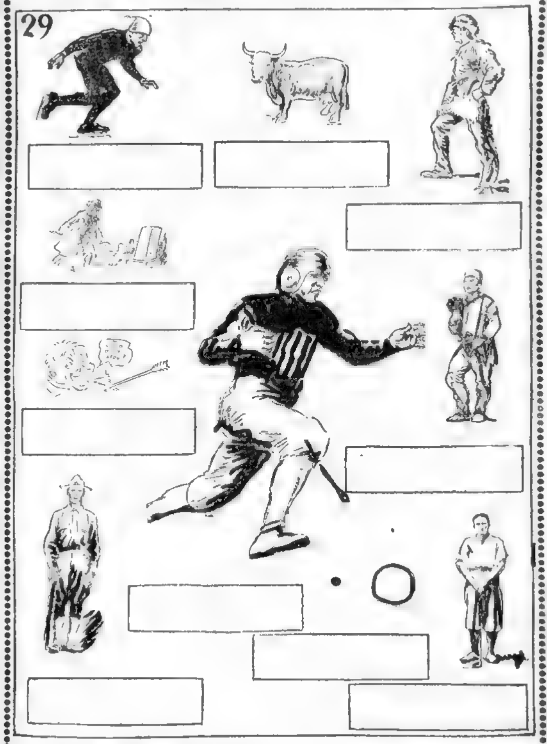
Ripley's WORD HUNT

$2500 In Cash Prizes FREE!

If you are playing this interesting game, be sure to find all ten descriptions to these pictures and also be sure to paste them under the right pictures. Remember—even if you have them all correct, neatness will count in making the awards. The LAST set appears TOMORROW!

"Believe It Or Not" By Ripley



FOLLOW THESE RULES

1. Everyone is eligible to participate in the "Word Hunt" except employes of the Boston Evening American, Boston Sunday Advertiser, and members of their families.

2. Every day from June 10 to July 10 (July 4 excepted) ten Ripley "Believe It Or Not" pictures (without descriptions) will be published. The descriptions for each picture will be published in the Classified Ad Columns.

3. The "Word Hunt" consists in finding the descriptions in the Classified Ads, clipping them out and placing each under the picture to which it refers. The words making up each description will appear in a single unit in one place.

4. Hold all the pictures until you have thirty complete sets of ten each—300 pictures in all. Then send them in to Ripley's "Word Hunt" Editor, Box 183, Boston, Mass.

5. All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight Thursday, July 17. No entries will be returned to sender.

6. Two thousand five hundred dollars in cash prizes in accordance with the complete prize list published herewith will be paid to the persons sending in the most nearly correct and neatest complete set of pictures at the close of the "Word Hunt."

7. A committee of judges will be appointed by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser to determine the successful contestants. All entrants agree to accept the decisions of these judges as final.

8. It is not necessary to purchase the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser to compete. This newspaper may be examined at its office or at the public libraries free of charge, and if you wish you may copy or trace the pictures from the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser and then assemble the sets from the copies you have made.

Smith Drives in Shower of Bombs

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

One convoy of wounded after another is the lot of the women's ambulance corps of which Helen Smith is a member. Commandant whom Tosh has christened "Mrs. [illegible]" is a hard task master. Strenuous work, little sleep and poor food show on the girls. When Smithy's mother writes giving her silly war views, Smithy, picturing the war-ravaged men, revolts. But letters from her war-nurse sister, Trix, are treats. Deaths are numerous and heart-rending. "Mrs. [illegible]" questions the girls regarding Tosh's and Skinny's [illegible] which led to a [illegible] [illegible] is sent home. Girls visit German prisoners and are shocked at their language.

CHAPTER 24

"Ambulances!"

Commandant's whistle blows.

The station rocks about me, up and down, up and down, like a ship coming up on the crest of a wave and sinking again into the hollows. I am sick with cold fright.

"Lights out!"

Mechanically I sit up straight behind my steering wheel. Mechanically I switch off the lights that I have been using against orders in my efforts to find The Bug.

The ambulance rocks up and down. I am watching myself from a distance, suspended in mid-air over the radiator front. Look, that's Nellie Smith sitting there—that white blob of a face with terrified eyes, that's Nellie Smith. That white-face blob is going to drive an ambulance of helpless men through a rain of dropping bombs. . . .

Ploo-oop! Crash.

The first bomb. A long way off. The convoy rounds the curve. Won't be here for ten minutes, says a voice, a wavy up and down voice. It is talking of the aeroplanes not the convoy, because the convoy is coming in the station now. I watch the white blob called Nellie Smith from the radiator.

Smith in Fear
Bombs Are Dropped

Quite calm. You wouldn't think she was dying of fear—wondering how long one can live when one's heart has ceased to beat at the thought of having to drive an ambulance of wounded through a rain of dropping bombs.

"I say, what a rag."

The girl in the next ambulance said that. She is one of the heroines the papers write about—smoking a cigarette in the face of danger. Talking to Nellie Smith. Nellie Smith begins to laugh hysterically giggling and laughing hysterically to hide that she is dying of cold fear.

Ploo-oop! Crash!

A round reddish moon, hanging low in the sky. Somewhere where there isn't war lovers are walking beneath it softly beautified by its rays. A lover's moon—not a moon to enable men in aeroplanes to drop bombs straight and sure. There must be some mistake. That's why Nellie Smith is laughing.

"Here, take a pull at this."

A stretcher bearer hands Nellie Smith a flask.

Ploo-oop. Bang!

The convoy pulls in, lights out, a dark, creeping, stealthy thing, quietly, as though afraid the enemy will hear the chug-a-chug of the engine.

Ploo-oop. Bang!

Nearer that time. Every time nearer. Why did I drink that brandy? It was easier when I could watch myself. My lips are dry. I am panting for breath. I can hear myself breathing in loud uneven spasms.

Ploo-oop. Bang!

A shell-shocked man begins to run senselessly up the platform, shouting madly. Three orderlies run after him, overpower him, rush him none too gently into the nearest ambulance and lock the doors on him.

Ploo-oop. Bang!

The heroine next door laughs. A pretty, tinkling laugh. A lovely flash wasn't it? Quite near, too. She is loaded. Still laughing, she drives off. In the moonlight her teeth gleam. The laughing heroine the papers idolise.

The bombs are dropping faster now. Every one a little nearer. Soon they will be over The Hill of the Witch's Hand, then the cemetery, then Number Thirteen—

Up and down, up and down, why are the stretcher-bearers waving the wounded up and down?

Jolly Sitter
Rides by Driver

It will be my turn to go in a minute. A sitter is being hoisted next to me—not very bad, only a broken arm—jolly, laughing, like the girl who was smoking a cigarette——

"They follow me about, mate."

WOMEN WAR OVER 'SPITE FENCE'

Built to Bar Children, Says One; "On My Land," Newton Neighbor Claims

Claiming that her neighbor has built a spite fence which injures her property, Mrs. Catherine Grinley, of River st., Newton, today took steps to have the matter brought before the courts.

While surveyors ran the lines of Mrs. Grinley's property, she engaged Atty. John J. Flynn, Jr., of Waltham to represent her in a controversy with Miss Mary Welch of Elm ct., Newton.

Elm ct. runs between the houses of Miss Welch, who lives with her mother, and Mrs. Grinley, a widow with four children.

Miss Welch contends that a tenement owned by Mrs. Grinley and located in the rear of her home, is frequently let to families with children and that it was to keep them out of Elm ct. that she erected the fence.

Mrs. Grinley claims that the fence is built on her side of Elm ct., not on the land of Miss Welch, that it is 5 feet high and 100 feet long. She says the fence is unsightly, shuts out the view and will prevent her from renting her property.

She contends that Miss Welch's property rights extend only to the middle of Elm ct., which, although a private way, has been used for many years by people living farther down.

Mrs. Grinley built a fence inside her own line 3½ feet high and 55 feet long, with a hedge extending the remainder of the distance on her property.

Painters Hurled 20 Feet to Ground

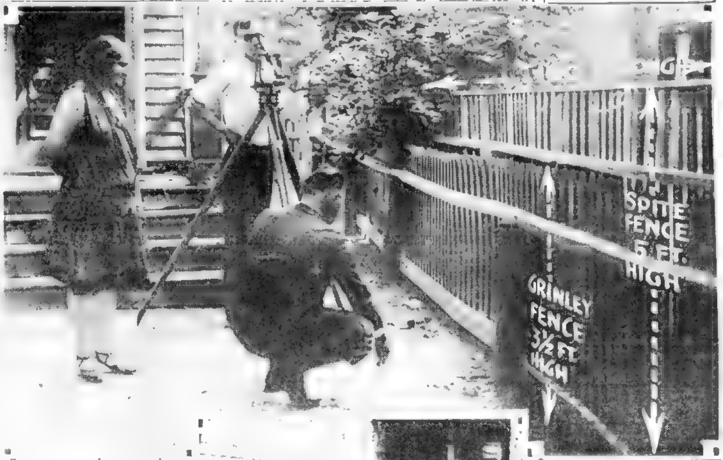
While painting a building at 18 Wakullah st., Roxbury, William Greer, 42, of 142 Day st., Jamaica Plain, and Richard Born, 40, of 17 Reeds st., Roxbury, fell 20 feet when the gutter on the roof gave away.

Both were picked up unconscious and rushed to the City Hospital, where their names were placed on the danger list. Greer has multiple contusions and possible fracture of the skull, and Born concussion of the brain and a possible skull fracture.

Boy's Leg Broken by Coal Truck

Harold Doane, five, of 119 Revere st., Winthrop, suffered a broken leg today when he was struck by a coal truck in Shirley st., Winthrop. He was taken to Winthrop Community Hospital. According to the police the truck was driven by William Derwin of Dorchester.

May Seek Court Aid on Fence



Surveyors are shown running a line along the property of Mrs. Catherine Grinley, shown looking on to determine whether or not the alleged spite fence is on her property. (Staff photo.)

MRS. ELIZABETH WELCH MISS MARY WELCH

Declaring that a fence erected by Miss Mary Welch of 4 Elm ct., Newton, is a spite fence and designed to injure her property, Mrs. Catherine Grinley, a widow with four children, is to appeal to courts to force Miss Welch to remove the fence. The bottom picture shows Miss Welch and her mother standing alongside the alleged spite fence.

BIG BARNEY ON STATION WHDH

Walter Johnson, one of the most beloved figures in big league baseball and always a favorite with the fans, will be interviewed by Joe Cashman, baseball writer of the Boston Evening American over radio station WHDH, in conjunction with the Boston Evening American, Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

The "Big Train" is now manager of the Washington Senators and has steered them into first place in the American League pennant chase ahead of the A's and Yankees.

All the world is rooting for Walter to cop the bunting. How he hopes to do this thing, what his battle plans are and a few more choice ideas of one of the greatest pitchers of all time, will be told by Johnson himself.

The station is WHDH. The time is 11 o'clock Thursday morning.

Wellesley Girl Among "Two-Gun" Baker's Clients

Lucilla O. Gilman, 18, blonde and stockingless Wellesley student "took her medicine" today in Quincy court when James H. "Two-Gun" Baker brought $183 worth of speeders into the toils.

She pleaded nolo, was charged $10, paid affably, and smiled pleasantly at Officer Baker as she left the court.

Baker was not so fortunate with two of his clients, for whom warrants were issued when they failed to appear.

4 HURT AS TIRE BLOWS OUT

Four persons were injured yesterday afternoon at Randolph ave. and Highland st., in Milton, when a front tire of the automobile driven by Alfred J. Cameron, Jr., of 104 Adams ave., West Newton, blew out.

Morris J. Gordon, 25, of 155 Ruthven st., Roxbury, driver of another machine, was carrying two passengers, Gertrude Schoolman, 20, of 170 Pleasant st., Milton, and her sister Lillian, 16.

Goode Laid to Rest

Funeral services for Richard Y. Goode, a former Somerville alderman, were held yesterday in the First M. E. Church, that city. The burial was in Oak Grove cemetery, Medford.

$100 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston American offers the opportunity. Every week $100 in prizes will be given for news tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor, at Liberty 4000.

And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

There will be $25 given weekly for the best, first exclusive news tip received, $15 for the next best, $10 for the next best and $2 prizes for each of the 25 next most valuable tips. Anyone who is alive and alert can win.

D'AGOSTINO'S RIVAL QUITS

While Ralph D'Agostino, Brockton's pole-sitting champion, announced he would stay up until he completed 34 days, Robert Lester Collins, 18, of South Hanson, who started a sitting Monday night, was out of the running today.

D'Agostino, who completed his 26th day atop a 40-foot pole in his back yard last night, said he probably would come down at 5.30 p. m. July 16, when he will have completed 34 days, 3½ hours.

Young Collins was ordered down from a pole in the yard of the L. Z. Thomas school at South Hanson by Warren Howard, chairman of the local school board.

He told the youth that spectators were ruining the newly seeded school lawn and Collins descended at 10 o'clock last night.

Collins is determined, however, to beat D'Agostino's record and will seek permission to put up a pole elsewhere.

D'Agostino has already received three offers from amusement or theatrical companies, but has accepted none of them. He will rest for five or six weeks before he appears in public or attempts any more feats.

To Hold Art Classes for Apprentices

Beginning in September, classes for apprentices in industry will be organized at Massachusetts School of Art.

The instruction will be carried out at manufacturing or merchandizing plants and at the school. John F. Alcott, head of the department of design of the school, will be in charge of the work.

Nicholson Heads Boxing Probe Board

The special commission created by the Legislature to investigate professional boxing and wrestling in Massachusetts organized today at the State House. Senator Donald W. Nicholson of Wareham was chosen chairman.

The commission will meet again Tuesday. It is expected the date of the first public hearing will be announced then.

BATTLE FOR FREEDOM IS RENEWED BY FEENEY

Says She Should Be Taken to Maternity Hospital for Visit From Stork

The fight to free from the Psychopathic Hospital Mrs. Josephine Di Mori, a prospective mother, took a new turn today when a mental specialist was sent to examine her.

Immediately on receiving his report Atty. John P. Feeney was to confer with Judge Francis J. Good of municipal court in an effort to prevent her child from being born in the institution.

Mrs. Di Mori is the mother of 11-year-old Santo Di Mori, who was killed a year ago by blackmailers.

She was sent to the Psychopathic Hospital after attacking a neighbor with an axe while brooding over the loss of her boy, whose disappearance and death drove her nearly frantic.

For three weeks Mrs. Di Mori who has several other children, has been confined to the institution while the courts and probation officers have attempted to find some solution of her case.

Questions as to her sanity have not been settled to the satisfaction of the court, and for this reason Atty. Feeney instructed a mental expert to visit her today.

Atty. Feeney, retained by Mrs. Di Mori's husband, contends she is now sane, and her child should be born either at home or in the maternity ward at City Hospital.

According to Atty. Feeney it would be the height of refined cruelty to compel the birth of an innocent child in a detention institution, and he hopes to effect the release of his client within a day or two.

He held a conference with Judge Good yesterday, and the visit of the mental expert is understood to have resulted from that meeting.

60-Foot Fall Kills Boston Fisherman

Word was received in Boston today of the death in Shelburne, N. S., of Noah Porter, 32, of East Boston, member of the crew of the swordfishing schooner Angie Watson of this port.

Two days ago while the schooner was on the Banks, Porter, a masthead man, fell from his lofty perch 60 feet to the deck. He was rushed to Shelburne, but died of his injuries according to the message sent by Capt. Stephen Davis of the schooner.

Political Posters Put Under State Ban

Candidates for political office who intend to plaster the countryside with stickers and posters will find this year it will be a waste of money.

Under the statutes governing the placing of signs, the new outdoor advertising division in the state department of public works, started today to tear down all signs already placed on fences, barns, boulders and other places along the highways.

NEW FEATHERS FOR EAGLE

Crowds gathered in Clarendon st., Back Bay, today while the large eagle over the main entrance of the John Hancock building received a new coat of gold feathers from Lewis Winchell and Robert J. Connelly, steeplejacks.

The eagle has been moulting for the last three days and today the new feathers shone in honor of the tercentenary observance.

Crisis in Argonne Due to Lack of Water

There was a crisis in the Argonne today, but not the same sort of crisis nor the same Argonne as in 1918. A water pipe leading from the street main in Bulfinch pl., West End, into the Hotel Argonne broke, cutting off the hotel's water supply. As a result when the guests arose they found they had no water. It took two hours to correct the trouble.

STAFF OF 500 FOR EDWARDS IN PARADE

Record Number of Officers to Attend Marshal in Tercentenary March

The largest staff ever to attend a parade chief marshal in Boston will accompany Gen. Clarence R. Edwards Tuesday during the parade preceding the main official commemoration of the Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary by the Commonwealth on Boston Common.

Between 400 and 500 reserve officers of the army and navy, recruited from nearly every city and town in the state, will be on Gen. Edwards' staff.

Col. John W. Hyatt, chief of staff, has sent invitations to every army officer in the state above the rank of captain and every naval officer above a lieutenant-commander to serve.

Maj.-Gen. Samuel S. Sumner, 88, and Brig.-Gen. William H. Bisbee, both Civil War veterans, will be on the honorary staff.

OVER 200 SETS OF COLORS.

More than 200 sets of colors of American Legion posts will be massed in the parade and in addition 10 sets of colors of the active 26th division and 150 guidons will be massed.

The 42nd battalion, Canadian Black Watch, and the crew of the British cruiser Durban will lend further color to the parade.

The Black Watch men are due in Boston Monday morning and will be met at the North Station by a company from the First Corps Cadets and escorted to the cadet armory.

A luncheon will be given the officers of the Watch at the home of Col. Harry A. Hale at Chestnut Hill Monday. That afternoon the men will go to a ball game and in the evening will be guests at a dinner at the Caledonia Club.

AIR PARADE.

Tuesday morning they will be entertained at breakfast by the Canadian Club at the Algonquin Club. Ex-Gov. Channing H. Cox will preside. The Watch will come to Boston in full dress uniform, comprising kilts, bearskin shakos and silver black tunics, and will be led by its pipe band of 25 pieces. The outfit will be in command of Maj. H. M. Wallis, D. S. O., M. C., a nephew of Sir Archibald Macdonnell, one of Canada's most distinguished soldiers.

Maj. Louis E. Boutwell, head of the 101st observation squadron, M. N. G., is in charge of arrangements for the air parade, to fly above the street parade. All available planes of the army, National Guard and commercial companies will be utilized by Maj. Boutwell, who himself will fly one of the National Guard ships.

MANY LOTTERY ARRESTS NEAR

Wholesale arrests may follow last night's raid on the "South End pool" headquarters in Revere pl., North End, where police of Hanover st. station seized documents bearing the names of three promoters and 200 agents.

All the agents are residents of Boston, according to the addresses found in a book. Police are verifying them before applying for warrants.

The lottery did a tremendous business, police say, and they found cancelled slips for a single month totalling $50,000.

The raid was made by Capt. John F. Rooney, Sergt. Robert Mooney and Special Officer Mark Madden of the Hanover st. station. They smashed in doors in the third floor apartment and found, in addition to the cancelled slips, between 15,000 and 20,000 lottery slips, and other papers pertaining to the pool.

All the documents were confiscated, along with three adding machines, and a truckload of furniture.

According to the police, the "Nigger Pool" was based on the New York bank clearings and paid at the rate of 600 to 1. Plays could be made from one cent up to $10, with the average amounts 25 and 50 cents.

Wind Shifts to West, Mercury Shoots Up

A sudden shift in the wind sent the mercury climbing six degrees in an hour today just after the weather man predicted cloudy with "not much change in temperature. The jump came after a comfortable night and early morning, climbing from 76 at 10 a. m. to 82 an hour later.

From southwest winds to westerly caused the change, he said, but he predicted a shift back to southwest again with comfortable temperatures for this season of the year. Tomorrow will be partly cloudy with light shifting winds mostly westerly.

Urges Probation for First Offenders

Commitment of first offenders to a reform school is like sending them to an academy of crime, former Asst. Dist.-Atty. George S. Harvey of Middlesex County told the Boston Kiwanis Club at luncheon at Boston City Club yesterday.

"Whenever it is possible for the government to recommend probation for first offenders in criminal cases, especially young boys, I feel it more of a sense of duty and good judgment to do so," added Harvey.

BOOM PETERS-THOMPSON AS DEMOCRATIC CHOICES FOR GOVERNOR

CURLEY WON'T LISTEN TO PLEA TO RUN

Former Dist. Atty. O'Brien to Settle Senatorial Race Aspirations in Few Days

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Mayor James M. Curley flatly declined today to be a candidate for Governor this fall, while the Democrats, attempting to write a winning slate, quietly advanced the names of former Mayor Andrew J. Peters and William G. Thompson, attorney, as a solution of the party tangle.

Both Peters and Thompson, it can be authoritatively stated, will have a prominent place in any discussion or conference considering candidates for Democratic nominations for United States senator and governor.

"I will not be a candidate for governor," Mayor Curley said today after reading Francis A. Campbell's demand that former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald withdraw his candidacy in favor of the present mayor.

"I've got a position here that requires 24 hours of my time daily," he continued. "I am not and will not be a candidate for governor. My only interest just now is in my present position as mayor of Boston."

CURLEY MAY RUN IN 1932

The suggestion of the Suffolk Superior court clerk failed to gain appreciable support elsewhere for there is a state-wide impression that Mayor Curley, after giving Boston one of its best administrations, will be the party's standard bearer for governor in 1932.

The Campbell statement is being interpreted as but another instance of dissatisfaction over Fitzgerald's candidacy rather than a serious move to thrust Mayor Curley into the field. Those in the party behind the Peters and Thompson boom are convinced that these two could win.

Former Mayor Peters, who is on a yachting trip until the first of August, is available for either gubernatorial or senatorial nomination, but will not be a candidate unless assured that his candidacy will be uncontested.

William G. Thompson, considered one of the ablest lawyers in the state, was today confined to his home with a slight illness. His connection with the Sacco-Vanzetti case, it is argued, will help rather than hurt him inasmuch as he will receive support from quarters normally Republican.

O'BRIEN TO DECIDE

The final decision of former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien, as to whether or not he will enter the race for U. S. senator, is expected within a few days. What that decision will be is anybody's guess. Sources close to O'Brien have it that he will throw his hat in with the active backing of the railroad trainmen, an organization with which he has been prominently identified for years.

At the Democratic State Committee headquarters, Chairman Frank J. Donahue, whose threat to quit and run for either of the two key positions brought on the crisis within the party, today was marking time. He declared that he expects to be in a position within a few days to state definitely when the conference of leaders and party workers will be called to go over the situation.

Quincy Not Annoyed Concerning Loss of Park

MERRYMOUNT PARK, Quincy, claimed as the personal property of Bruce K. Ainsworth, a London business man. Ainsworth placed his claim before the City Council and declares he will battle for the property.

BRUCE K. AINSWORTH claims he is relative of Sarah Bruce, niece of Thomas Morton, who was banished from the colonies 305 years ago. Ainsworth claims he is the sole heir to the line and is the rightful owner of Merrymount Park. (Staff photos.)

BABY VOLSTEAD PLEA FILED

Breaking all records for completion of an initiative petition, the Constitutional Liberty League filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth today, 8914 certified signatures of registered voters demanding repeal of the Baby Volstead Act.

The signatures virtually assure the placing of the question of repeal of the Baby Volstead Act on the ballot in the state election next fall.

By law, 5000 names are required to place the question on the ballot. The last day for filing is August 6.

Every signature has been carefully checked and examined by Wilbur F. Turner, handwriting expert, to comply with all legal requirements.

Hurt in Crash on Way to Hospital

On the way to a hospital for medical aid, Mrs. Walter Rothman of Fitchburg, her husband and two other men were injured in an auto crash at Concord ave. and Fayerweather st., Cambridge, yesterday.

John Kiernan of Fitchburg and Andrew Peterson of Perth Amboy, N. J., with the Rothmans, were taken to Cambridge City hospital and all treated for injuries of the head and body. The party was bound for the Massachusetts General hospital when in collision with a truck driven by Patrick J. Lavalle of Malden.

Hultman Praises Three Patrolmen

Three police officers were awarded an extra day's vacation and commended by Commissioner Hultman last night for the "prompt, tactful and helpful assistance" they rendered at the Charlestown fire last week, while they were off duty.

The three to be granted the day off are Patrolman Arthur T. Prescott of the traffic division on Milk st., who was on a "day off"; Patrolman Joseph H. Tierney of the same division, who was off duty, and Patrolman John F. Meehan of the Hanover st. station.

Secretary in Court Fight for Salary

Unable to obtain her salary because the Civil Service Commission refuses to recognize her appointment, Miss Mary E. McGoldrich, secretary to Mayor John J. Murphy, of Somerville, yesterday filed in Middlesex Superior Court a writ of mandamus designed to compel recognition of her appointment and the release of her salary.

Commissioner Elliott H. Goodwin, and his associates, George M. Harlow and Patrick J. McMahon, are cited to appear before the Supreme Court at Boston, July 16, to show cause why a writ should not be issued.

Miss McGoldrich recites that she was appointed by Mayor Murphy, and confirmed by the Somerville aldermen, that she has faithfully performed her duties to the satisfaction of the Mayor, but that on May 20 the city auditor and treasurer were notified that she was employed contrary to the civil service laws, and that, since then, her salary has been held up.

Goodwin and his associates have since refused to rescind their action interfering with her employment, she states, and Goodwin has refused to cease interference with the carrying on of the business of the mayor's office and continues to violate her lawful rights.

She contends that, under the general laws, "secretaries and confidential stenographers of the mayor of any city are exempt from operation of the civil service laws."

She asks the court to order the commissioners to authorize her employment, that her status as secretary be honored and recognized, and that an order be issued authorizing the auditor and treasurer of Somerville to pay her salary.

Football Games for Legion Convention

Legionnaires coming to the annual national convention of the American Legion, to be held in Boston, October 6-9, of this year, will have the opportunity of attending football games of three of New England's leading colleges — Harvard, Boston College and Yale.

The Boston College-Quantico Marines game on Monday, October 6, the first day of the convention, is a part of the Legion convention program. The invitation to the Harvard game, which will be against Springfield at the Stadium, comes from the Harvard A. A. through Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge and the Cambridge Post of the American Legion.

4 BOYS HELD IN ROBBERIES

A cigarette lighter, recognized by a police officer, led to the arrest yesterday of four boys, alleged "thrill burglars," for a series of sensational house breaks in Jamaica Plain.

The boys are Austin Smith, 15, of Ballard st.; Robert Matthews, 13, of Weld Park; Arthur Stedman, 15, sey of Newbern st., Jamaica Plain, sey of Newburne st., Jamaica Plain.

Police charge that, in the course of an extended investigation into breaks occurring in the homes of wealthy Jamaica Plain residents, Special Officer Roy Bates of the Seaverns ave. station came upon the Matthews boy holding a cigarette lighter which he thought he recognized as coming from one of the burglarized homes.

CARRIAGE 150 YEARS OLD

Another one-horse shay, eclipsing its famous predecessor by 50 years of service, will be one of the outstanding features of the Tercentenary parade in Newburyport today.

The vehicle was built for William Bartlett of that city 150 years ago and has been owned by members of the family or their heirs since that time.

The present owner is Samuel Shaw of Brookline, son of former State Treasurer E. P. Shaw. Shaw will drive the carriage in the parade wearing the costume of a gentleman of the time when "one-horse shays" were quite the thing.

QUINCY TO HEAR BRITON'S CLAIM

"To give the visitor all due courtesy," the Quincy City Council will hold a special meeting tomorrow night to hear officially the claim of Bruce Ainsworth, English visitor, who claims an heir title to part of Merrymount.

This was announced today as the latest in the turn of events whereby parks and playgrounds in the city's system were threatened when Ainsworth said he found title in an old will as a descendant of Thomas Morton, early settler.

Councilor Ralph W. Prout, the only attorney in the council, doubted the presence of a legitimate claim and saw Ainsworth's visit here as a "feeler" before returning to England for additional evidence.

Meanwhile, Quincy residents refused to be disturbed over the threat against the peace and tranquility of its beloved Merrymount.

FAIL TO TRACE LIQUOR ROUTE

Jonathan Lewis, local prohibition administrator, has so far been unable to verify the reports that shipments of contraband liquors have been made from Montreal via Boston, to Chicago.

He has found that no such concerns exist as those named in bills of lading confiscated here. Some of this alleged Canadian liquor has been seized in Boston and it was by no means the high grade alcoholic beverage it purported to have been. Tests revealed that it was a cheap grade of alcohol, highly colored, and, if not poisonous, was surely not fit for a beverage.

Some 23 cases, packed loosely and carelessly to appear like machinery parts or other merchandise, were seized and "dumped" into the sewer. No claimants appeared and the markings on the cases were found to be fictitious, no such concern being known.

PARKER FLAYS BOY DEATH CAR TEACHER

Revokes License of Youth Instructor in Auto Which Killed 1, Injured 2

With a scathing denunciation of John Lapinsky, of Lawrence, for his "flagrant bad judgment" and "culpable negligence," Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker today revoked the license of Lapinsky as a result of the death of an unidentified man on Commonwealth ave., near Lake st., by a car which, the registrar says, was in charge of the 16-year-old boy.

"At the time of this fatal accident Lapinsky was attempting to teach one John W. Shork of 7 Fairbanks st., Brighton, to drive, although Lapinsky himself was only 16 years old and had been licensed to drive only ten days," the registrar commented.

"Besides causing the death of the pedestrian, Lapinsky's car collided with another auto, injuring its two occupants. The scene of the accident was opposite an Elevated street railway and bus transfer station.

"This is the most flagrant case of bad judgment and of culpable negligence in teaching an unlicensed person to drive.

"In the first place, the unlicensed operator, in this particular instance, certainly showed very poor judgment, to say the least, in selecting a 16-year-old novice to teach him to operate such a potentially dangerous instrument as a high-powered car.

"Furthermore, Lapinsky, being so inexperienced, should not have undertaken to teach another person to drive. Still less should he have chosen such a dangerous place to do his teaching as a street where there is usually heavy traffic and where pedestrians cross to and from a transfer station."

NO MERE MICE FOR "TEDDY"

Speak respectfully when you mention "Teddy," the Malden feline that eats the hearts of calves without stopping to lick his whiskers.

"Teddy is fussy about his food," his owner, Mrs. F. D. Scott of 126 Franklin st., Malden, said today. "Anything as dainty as a mouse is no meat for him. He prefers calves' hearts, with cream cheese and puffed wheat."

Fortified with this he-cat diet, "Teddy" goes forth to battle the cats in his neighborhood and the streets are instantly cleared of rivals.

Teddy is four years old and weighs 12 pounds—all solid muscle. He is half Angora.

"He is better than a watchdog for keeping cats and dogs out of our yard," Mrs. Scott declares. "Teddy is our guard and will fight any cat on the least provocation."

When this champion wants his meals he approaches the icebox, places his paws on the handle and meows. He is accustomed to being obeyed, too!

THE GEORGE ARLISSES are enjoying a holiday in England before Mr. Arliss returns to Hollywood and the movies. Oh, yes, Mr. Arliss, with John Galsworthy and a few others who were outspoken in their opinion of the silent movies, are apparently completely converted to the talkies. When Mr. Arliss returns to this country he will be starred in "The Devil" for Warner Brothers. That's Ferenc Molnar's play, the one in which Mr. Arliss played on the stage. I find that the Arliss public has followed him to the screen and that his popularity has greatly increased in the movies.

THE CHIEF brought Ronald Colman back to Hollywood last night. Ronald had no divorce papers in his pocket, at least, when his friends inquired he didn't seem to know what they were talking about. He has had a fine holiday in London, where his pal, William Powell, and he spent some time together. Ronald starts work as soon as a story is ready for him. It seems doubtful that Louis Bromfield will write the Colman story since he is busy with "Dracula" and up to now he has done really nothing on the Colman picture.

COOPER VET OF MANY ROLES

Claude Cooper, of the cast in "The Long Road," due Monday at the Plymouth, is a veteran of the theater. Boston will remember him as the "Sheriff" in the Front Page, and in a lot of other important roles. He made his debut when 18 months old at the Royal Lyceum Theater in 'Castle Grim' and his first United States appearance in "The Silver King" in 1887. Few living actors can boast of playing the number of roles he has. His record is 733 roles, 33 of which were in Broadway successes. Mr. Cooper was also a pioneer motion picture director, being with the Thanhauser Company in New Rochelle, N. Y., as far back as 1914, when the industry was in its swaddling clothes.

WILBUR STAR IS FRENCH

Odette Myrtil, who has one of the leading roles in Alexander Leftwich's "Tattles Tales," opening at the Wilbur on Tuesday next, is French. She came to this country at an early age and met J. J. Shubert, who raved about her. She developed into an exceptional dramatic actress. At the height of her dramatic career she switched to musical work J. J. Shubert became incensed and told her she was crazy. He finally put her in a musical. In "Tattle Tales" she has abandoned love songs and playing opposite young juveniles She will be seen in "Pierronade," a pantomime of her own origination, with music by herself.

Odette Myrtil

Her husband, Stanley Logan former actor, is general stage director for the Shuberts. They have a young son, Stanley, Jr. who watches his mother religiously at rehearsals. Her hobby is dogs

HUB FOLK SPONSOR FILM SHOWINGS IN TROPICS

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Aboard the United Fruit liner San Gil in the Caribbean.

Any lover of art and industry of motion pictures would be proud of the missionary work the sponsors of the Great White fleet home offices in Boston, of course—are doing for the films in certain ports in these tropic parts.

This vagabond writer frankly confesses getting a thrill out of the contribution of the great U. F. Co. thus is it famous over a large sector of at least one of the seven seas is making to advancement of the movies. It is a story worth the telling first, because it reflects credit upon the New England that sent its pioneers into the four corners in past generations, second, because it is boosting the cause of American-made films in places quite far away from home country. There is a third reason, too; that entertainment is furnished to many sons of Yankeeland, their wives, and children, residing [illegible] visiting these places.

The United Fruit line, famous for its fleet, its cruises, and its transportation of fruits, furnishes motion picture shows at frequent intervals in a number of these Latin-American ports. [illegible] shows are promoted for the good of the service, are handled by experts, into whose hands are entrusted the fate of silent editions of Hollywood product

To date not many theaters, so we are informed, have been equipped for sound, within a large radius from this spot, almost directly beneath the sun. The films are shipped from the states, of course, sub-titles are done both in English and Spanish.

The company maintains numerous features for the entertainment of its employes and friends. The port of Tela, in Honduras, furnishes a good example of what is being done in the movie line Here there is a community clubhouse, equipped with all the settings for dances, dinners, and so on. In the main salon, two or three times a week, at least, the film shows are given. No charge is made for admission and employes, when telling about the exhibitions, are enthusiastic in expressing their appreciation

We confess a joy in seeing silent pictures, and are quick to assure these new found friends that many of their films are better silent than with sound Not that we do not like the talkies; we do. But sound has its setbacks, and the day of the perfect talkie is not yet, so far as the true and perfect art of the motion picture is concerned. We have had to listen to a good [illegible] films which we would have preferred in silent form.

The films may be a little late in reaching these Latin-American ports, but they are thoroughly enjoyable just the same

As I write, the word is passed to me that plans are under way for the introduction of the sound screen hereabouts.

This may prove a blessing—or, again, it may result in audiences wishing the films might still be all gold in silence. But these ports want to keep up with the march of progress, and with the films it is just as with the women we see They want, and do dress in the latest styles; no 1929 models for them. So also with the films.

WARNER WILL GUIDE RELIEF

A signal honor has been conferred upon J. L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production for Warner Bros., in his election as president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

The office is bestowed upon Mr. Warner after several years of activity in the organization on behalf of needy motion picture workers in every field

Mary Pickford, outgoing president, turned over the gavel to Warner, who led the gathering in a vote of thanks for her fine work during the year in which she held office

Last year the Relief Fund raised more than $75,000 for the ill and needy within the industry.

J. L. Warner's cabinet of officers of the Motion Picture Relief Fund includes Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president; Mary Pickford, second vice-president; Will Hays, third vice-president; M. C. Levee, treasurer; A. W. Stockman, secretary.

GOSSIP ALONG RIALTO

Arthur Hammerstein will begin rehearsals for "Luana" at an early date. "Luana" is the new name for the musical version of "The Bird of Paradise," about which there has been so much discussion in the Hammerstein office these last few weeks.

Howard Emmett Rogers is adapting the play for musical production, and Rudolf Friml and J. Keirn Brennan are preparing music and lyrics. Jack Haskell and Alonzo Price have been engaged to stage various parts of the production.

Ruth Altman, Robert Chisholm, Joseph Macauley, Jans and Whalen, Lillie Bond, Adele Sanderson, Louis Morrell and Anne Yago are among those announced as members of the cast.

Moss Hart's newest play "No Retreat," was put in rehearsal by the Hampton Players who will give it its first production out on Long Island. Hart has already had one play, "Once in a Lifetime," tried out for production next fall. That will be done by Sam H. Harris.

EDMUND LOWE AND MARGUERITE CHURCHILL

Film Facts

First National plans to star Leon Janney, the youngster who has been placed under contract to Warner, in Booth Tarkington's "Penrod."

Its first Italian film is announced for production by Italatone under the title "Georgette and Company." Alfredo Savato and Guida Trento will direct. The chief feminine role will be in the hands of Louise Caselotti, who has been appearing in grand opera.

Alison Skipworth, Beryl Mercer and Lionel Watts have been added to the cast of "Outward Bound," the former stage hit which Warner is making into a film.

M-G-M has signed Adolphe Menjou to play in French and Spanish as well as English dialogue pictures. During his stay abroad the actor appeared in a French talking film.

PATHE CHIEF DIRECTS ALL PRODUCTION

E. B. Derr, who was recently elevated to the presidency of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and who is a close friend of Joseph P. Kennedy, of Boston, will spend the greater portion of his time at the Culver City Studios giving his personal attention to all production activities. Although he is one of the youngest major executives in the motion picture industry, Mr. Derr came to his present position with a business experience that had placed him in close contact with practically all the fundamental industries of the world.

E. B. Derr

Born in Bethlehem, Pa., he was a prominent executive with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. This was not until he had tried his hand in the newspaper, hotel and railroad business in turn, however, in his native city.

In 1919, he was appointed comptroller of Bethlehem Steel's Fore River Shipyards and it was here that he became first associated with Mr. Kennedy, who was then the assistant general manager. During their association, these shipyards employed 26,000 people and expended $750,000,000 in the building of destroyers, submarines, emergency fleet freighters and the Battleship Lexington. After the war, Derr succeeded Mr. Kennedy as president of the United States Mutual Liability and Insurance Co.

In 1921, he again became associated with Mr. Kennedy, who has secured the New England rights to Robertson-Cole Pictures.

When Mr. Kennedy took over FBO, Derr became director and treasurer of this company, and it was he who arranged the merger between Keith and FBO.

After lining up the FBO program for 1928-29, Derr reorganized Pathe and became executive vice-president of the latter organization in February, 1928.

HEARST NEWS COVERS WIDE FIELD

Two outstanding items are presented in the Hearst Metrotone News issue now being shown at Loew's State. The first is of tremendous interest, as it has to do with one of the foremost topics of the day, England's troubles in India. V. J. Patel, a Bombay leader, tells why his country demands freedom, and asks that America give the India people some measure of sympathy

The other is humorous. Billy March, a Connecticut lad of 11, is shown with his kid brother printing his book, "The Life of Hoover." When asked by a reporter why he chose Hoover to write about, he replied

"I've always liked Mr. Hoover, and he has the same ideas as myself on prohibition."

Other items presented are Dr Prince, ambassador to Jugoslavia, presenting his own musical composition to the Belgrade Royal Band; Canadian Cadets in a series of clever gymnastic exhibitions; a trip through the fjords of Norway, and Amy Johnson, girl flier, being welcomed in Australia after her flight from England.

Eddie Dowling Born Sans Silver Spoon

Eddie Dowling, author, producer, song-writer and star of musical comedy and the screen, who is at the Keith-Albee this week, was born into a family made up of almost as many kids as those who put the "old woman who lived in a shoe" into rhyme; and as one of 27 children he didn't get his dinner served to him in a silver dish. So it was that he went forth to seek fame and fortune by leaving his home in Providence, R. I., when he was only 12 years old.

HUB SEES NOVEL TEXACO 'OIL' PARADE

Boston, though used to many spectacles, rubbed its eyes on seeing an interesting parade yesterday.

Four medieval pages in doublet and hose paraded through the downtown section with be-pennanted trumpets, announcing the new Texaco motor oil, while further on in the line was the latest type of amplifying sound device mounted on a bright red Texaco motor truck, 'telling the world' in the latest modern manner.

Service station operators of Boston and vicinity celebrated the introduction of the new Texaco motor oil into this locality by holding this parade of automotive equipment of all kinds. Almost 200 vehicles were in the line and the parade, which covered most of the city, was 12 blocks in length.

Lining up at Southampton st., the parade proceeded up to Massachusetts ave., to Huntington ave., to Stuart st., to Park sq., to Charles st., to Cambridge st., to Chardon st., to Portland st., to Causeway st., to Commercial st., to Atlantic ave., to Kneeland st., to Harrison ave.

The Texaco Band, uniformed in Texaco red, preceded the four trumpeters heralding the advent of the new and revolutionary Texaco Motor Oil. After them came officials of The Texas Company—tank trucks, and almost 200 automobiles of Texaco dealers and salesmen.

This parade was part of a nationwide announcement on the part of The Texas Company of a revolutionary refining achievement, making possible a wholly new motor oil, said to have created a sensation in petroleum circles.

This product is now available in every one of our 48 states according to J. K. Skillings, local district manager.

OIL SYSTEM IN OAKLAND GOOD

Much of the credit for the trouble-free stamina displayed by the Oakland Eight during the half year it has been in the hands of owners should be given to its highly effective full pressure oiling system, according to Dwight Harsey of the Oakland Motor Car Co. of N. E.

Located below the oil level in the oil pan, a powerful gear-type oil pump supplies lubricant under a pressure of 25 to 30 pounds per square inch to crankshaft main bearings, connecting rod lower end bearings, camshaft bearings, valve rocker arm bearings the two point timing chain and, through rifle-drilled connecting rods, to the piston pin bearings. Thus every vital point in the engine is protected by a high-pressure supply of oil. Furthermore, oil sprayed from the sides of the connecting rod bearings provides lubrication for pistons and cylinder walls, cams and rocker arm rollers.

The oil pump obtains its power from an extension of the vertical distributor shaft which in turn is actuated by gearing on the rear end of the camshaft.

Durant Offices Move to Lansing

Removal of the executive offices of Durant Motors from the present headquarters in the Maccabee building in Detroit to the factory office building in Lansing is announced by F. J. Haynes, president of Durant Motors.

"The move is prompted by our desire to maintain a closer relationship between the production and the sales departments," Haynes said. "Hitherto the various officials of offices and factory have been forced to commute back and forth between Lansing and Detroit for consultations. Now, after July 1, we will all be in the same building at Lansing."

Proper Care Needed for All Machines

The expense of operating a car and the length of its useful life depends entirely on the care it gets whether in storage or driven on highways and byways. A modern car, whether cheap, medium-priced or costly, should never be neglected. Use a good grade of oil and gasoline.

Keep the working parts clean, radiator filled with water and proper charge in the battery. Tires should carry the correct air pressure and the load of the car should not exceed its maximum hauling weight.

Kerosene Rag Good on Chromium Plate

The best way for preserving the original luster of chromium plated and baked enamel parts of a car is to polish with a rag dampened in kerosene or a good grade of oil polish. This applies to headlamps, radiators, fenders, etc.

World Output of Autos Increasing

The world production of automobiles during 1929 set a record of 6,300,000, a gain of more than 1,000,000 over 1928. About 685,000 cars were manufactured outside of the United States and Canada last year.

Gets New Post

HORNER NAMED NEW MANAGER

Announcement was made recently of the appointment of John A. Horner to New England district manager of tire sales for the United States Rubber Co.

During the past 19 years Horner has held executive positions in the tire industry at Pittsburgh, Pa.; Baltimore, Md.; Fort Wayne, Ind., and Richmond, Va.

"Although a native of Baltimore, Md., I am very happy to be located in the New England territory, where I find sales substantially exceeding sales for the same period last year," says Mr. Horner. "It was the rapidly growing popularity of the U. S. line which led to my connection with this company."

BUICK LEADS IN HOLDERS OF LOW NUMBERS

"Personal pride of ownership plus many years of producing high class dependable cars form the background of Buick leadership in the Bay State in one outstanding field—that of low number plates," states E. F. Herrick, of the Noyes Buick Co.

"Of the first 650 low numbers in Massachusetts more than three times as many are on Buicks as on any other make of car. This certainly is a splendid tribute from the motorists who first drove one-cylinder cars with no windshields.

"These figures are more significant in Massachusetts because the State unconsciously has set up a sort of 'caste' group in low numbers. Each year owners having had plates with small numbers are allowed to continue holding them.

"Some holders of these numbers have been offered several hundred dollars to allow a transfer. There have been instances where motorists have been offered extra prices for old cars if the low numbers went with them.

"To build up its leadership in this field proves that Buick has been giving satisfaction for many years. It shows that holders of low numbers have been going consistently into the Buick class. Also that Buick owners have remained loyal to its prestige."

Breaking in Auto Requires Patience

It is important that the car should be throttled down to 25 or 30 miles an hour for the first 1000 miles. During this period a pint of thin oil mixed with each five gallons of gasoline in the fuel tank will help the lubrication process.

This oil injected with the fuel into the combustion chambers will help lubricate the cylinder walls while the pistons fit snugly and perhaps too tightly to permit the oil in the crankcase from getting through effectively.

NAFE NOW REO ADVERTISING MANAGER

Arthur F. Nafe, for many years well known in automotive merchandising circles, has been appointed manager of advertising and sales promotion for the Reo Motor Car Co., it is announced by Elgin G. Poxson, general sales manager of the company.

A. E. Nafe

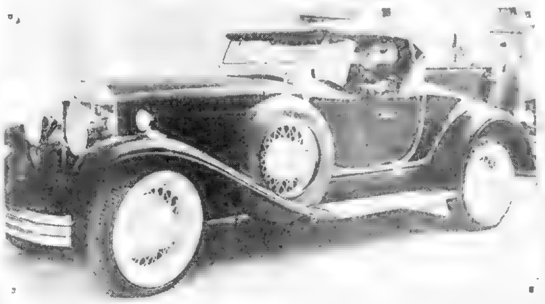
Mr. Nafe has been with Willys-Overland for four years as sales manager at home office executive and before that was with Dodge Brothers for many years, first in charge of various districts, then as director of service, and finally as director of national business sales. Before his entry into the automobile industry he served on the editorial staffs of newspapers in many cities, including Denver, Portland and Seattle. He has also conducted an advertising agency of his own.

"Ned Nafe's thorough familiarity with various phases of motor car merchandising and exceptionally broad experience," Mr. Poxson says, "assures the Reo distributing organization of the counsel of a man with a thorough understanding of their problems."

Offers Farm and All for Oaklands

A 20-acre farm complete with farmhouse, barn, corn crib, chicken house and [illegible] recently was offered to Oakland Motor Co. in exchange for two Oakland eight sedans. The unusual offer came from R. F. Hansen who lives six miles from Savenburg, Kansas. He was referred to the nearest Oakland-Pontiac dealer.

Bill Powell Shines Behind Willys



LOOKS AS THOUGH Bill Powell, who has risen to great heights in his portrayal of Philo Vance, in Paramount's presentation of the S. S. Van Dine mystery stories, might be on a fresh scent—or his winning smile may be due to deep satisfaction as he sits behind the wheel of a brilliant new Willys-Knight Great Six Roadster.

STIFF TEST FOR FORD REAR END

The ability of the rear end of the Ford car and truck to stand up under hard usage is constantly maintained by an ingenious testing device designed by Ford engineers and located in the general assembly room of the [illegible] plant. [illegible] The [illegible] weight [illegible] loaded car or truck and the [illegible] is put in motion.

BEYOND all question, a good eight-cylinder motor has certain advantages over a good motor of fewer cylinders. The De Soto Straight Eight was designed for motorists who prefer eight-cylinder performance to any other kind, but who refuse to pay the prices heretofore asked for good eights. It stands comparison with any of them in flexibility, smoothness and agility of performance. It is appealingly smart in appearance; staunch in construction; rich in stamina. You feel the quality of the car in the way it rides; in the way it handles; in the way it responds. Chrysler engineering genius and Chrysler manufacturing efficiency have made it the lowest-priced eight ever built to such fine quality standards.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel's youth arouses envy and admiration on the ship to France. Mrs. Dexter, a very wealthy woman, arranges to duplicate some of the gowns in Paris. Meanwhile she turns one of her maids, Frieda, over to Raquel to get beauty hints.

CHAPTER 36

The day the Gloire de France was to land at Havre, Raquel had another talk with Mrs. Dexter.

The woman seemed torn between desperation and determination. She blew cold, then hot. One moment she was sinking into an abyss of despair. The next moment she was scaling the mountain of high hope.

"You look different somehow," Raquel told her. "More alive."

"You noticed it?" Mrs. Dexter was all eagerness. "Frieda has taken me in hand. She is really quite devoted to you. 'Mademoiselle Raquel does this. Mademoiselle Raquel says that.' You are sort of a goddess of beauty."

"It is nice of her to like me."

"Yes. The eyes of our servants are worth looking through. They see us at our best—and our worst. Frieda has always wanted me to take better care of myself. Now she's in her glory. She's like a little girl with a doll. Look at my hair. She's copied yours, exactly."

New Clothes

Waiting in France

What a change the dressing of hair could work in a woman! Mrs. Dexter's hair no longer straggled. Even the color was better. Brushing had brought out glints of bronze. Touches of rouge on her cheeks took away something of the unhappiness in her eyes, made them brighter, less like those of a hurt creature. With another dress—chic—youngish—

"I know," Mrs. Dexter said. "My clothes are impossible. I see it now. Monsieur Alphonse has cabled to Paris. There will be lots of them waiting for me there. Among them a jade green evening grown, like the one you wore the night I met you. I really believe it was you and that stunning green effect with the coral, that converted me."

"Then the gown has served well," said Raquel, delighted that she had obtained what would undoubedly be a profitable order for Alphonse.

"And Mademoiselle Raquel," Mrs. Dexter hesitated uncertainly. "I want to ask you about the coral earrings you wore. They were fascinating. I have never seen any just like them. They gave just the right fillip to the gown. I forgot to speak to Alphonse about them. Were they a part of the ensemble?"

"No," Raquel said, suddenly gone cold inside. "They—I just happened to have them."

Mrs. Dexter was scaling the mountain again.

"Could you—would you—consider selling them to me?" she asked.

Raquel's black eyes widened, stared through the woman at something she was seeing out there in space.

"I shall never part with the coral earrings," she said softly. Then added, in a more casual tone: "They really have no value—except to me. You see, they belonged to my mother."

"Oh—I'm so sorry. I shouldn't have asked."

"Oh yes, you should," Raquel hastened to insist. "I'm glad you liked them. I'm sure you can find some similar. Or perhaps you could have others made, with mine as a model."

"You're a dear," said Mrs. Dexter. "If you'll leave them with Alphonse when we get to Paris, I'll see that nothing happens to them. My jeweler can copy them. And when I return them, I'll include another pair, one of the new designs, for your trouble."

Keep Earrings

Promise of New Ones

If Mrs. Dexter sent her another pair of earrings as a gift, she'd return the coral ones to Lucy across the ocean. No, she'd send Lucy the new ones. Lucy would like the new ones better. It was so rarely that anything new came into the life of Pancho Rojos' Lucy.

"Yes," Raquel decided. "I'll keep the coral earrings. I'll never part with them. They are a lucky talisman. They bring me good fortune."

Late that evening, when Raquel was going to the suite "to freshen up a bit," when she came face to face with Bertie Adams on the stairs.

He was about to pass her by with a quick nod and the merest suggestion of a shamed smile. Suddenly he changed his mind and called her name.

"Er—Miss Rojos."

Raquel stopped and greeted him cordially.

"I want to tell you again," he said, a flush staining his bronzed cheeks, "how genuinely sorry I am about—making such an ass of myself the other night."

Raquel's black eyes met his gray ones. There was neither animosity nor blame in their sable depths. Rather, there was admiration for this tall young man with the body of a Greek god, his fair hair brushed back from a clean brow, his well-modeled chin square-cut and strong.

Admiration and pity. Why did men like him sodden their fine bodies, befog their keen brains with drink? Why had Pancho, her father, done it? Pancho must have been very much like Bertie Adams, once fine and clean and square-cut. Before he took to mescal and tequila. Before he cut himself off from his proud Spanish family, from his high-placed friends, from the society of decent men.

If Pancho had taken a hold on himself, if he had slain the devils within him, her whole life might have been different. Lucy's life would have been different. They would be persons of consequence. Somebodies.

Are Friends

Bertie Is Forgiven

Well, Pancho had failed them. As Bertie Adams would fail some woman. Unless—she wished Bertie Adams could see Pancho now. Bolting tortillas wolfishly. Ripping out vile oaths. Using his great fists on helpless women and children; his own woman, his own children.

She was silent so long that Adams mistook the silence for resentment. He would have murmured an apology and gone on were it not for her eyes. They held another verdict. Strange eyes. Like black pools with candles flickering in their unplumbed depths.

"I understand," Raquel said simply.

"I had hoped—that it, I wanted very much that we should be friends," he went on, encouraged by her kindness.

"We can be friends."

"You mean you'll forgive me entirely—you'll let me see you again?"

"Yes, if you wish it."

"Then I shall look you up in Paris. There are some places I'd like to show you, some people I know you'd enjoy—if you'll give me the name of your hotel."

Her hotel? She didn't have a hotel. She hadn't the slightest notion where she would stop. He'd think it was queer.

"I haven't quite decided," she said.

"Then if you'll tell me where you are receiving your mail—"

Mail? She wasn't receiving any mail. There was no one to write to her. She was alone. Suspended in a void.

"Just address me care of Monsieur Alphonse," she said, hastening to cover her embarrassment with the glibness of her answer. "I've arranged to receive all my correspondence through his office."

She had almost said "through him." She had been stopped by the recollection of something Greta had said — "Alphonse is crazy about you." Had others noticed what Greta thought she detected? Greta was a suspicious little monkey, full of plots and motives. Still, she was glad she had substituted Alphonse's office for Alphonse himself.

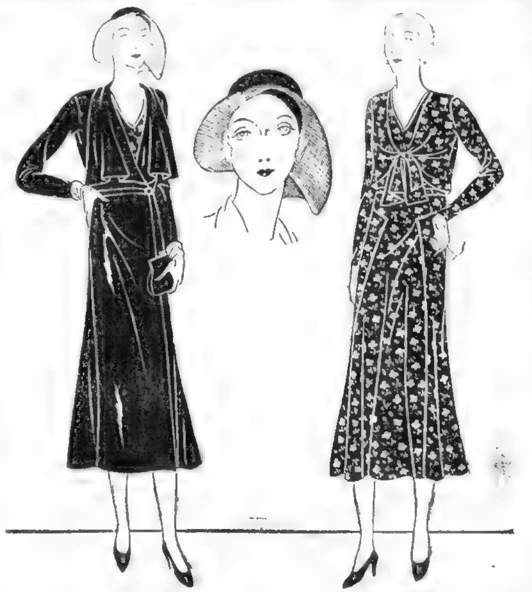
What's in Fashion?

Points of 1930 Summer Costume

Directed by AMOS PARRISH



NEW YORK, July 9—Take any typical daytime coat, dress or hat that is decidedly and completely summer 1930 and compare them with a coat, dress or hat that is just as decidedly 1929. What are the big differences—what labels the former 1930?

Let's Take the Coat First

Point I. The typical 1930 coat is longer. It comes to the middle calf which is just about 3 inches longer than the summer 1929 coat. That extra length is one of the big differences that immediately marks a coat as rightly belonging to 1930 Fashion.

Point II. The 1930 coat closes in some way by itself. The 1929 coat had to be held closed by the arm or hand. The 1930 coat is more independent. Sometimes it is held by a belt placed at the normal waistline—one of the newest ways sponsored by Chanel. The coat illustrated is one belted in the correct 1930 way. Sometimes it is wrapped way around under the left arm and buttoned there, as Vionnet likes to do it.

And Typical 1930 Hat

Point I. It shows more of the forehead than its predecessor did a year ago. Not too much of the forehead—just about half. Whether it is a typical off-the-face model a modified cloche, a cuff hat, or a formal beret, it is sure to show that much of the forehead. And that means that the 1930 crown is shallower in the front. And it is necessary to wear any new hat in this 1930 forehead-showing way. If you pull it too far down it can't help but look like a 1929 hat.

Point II. It is more manipulated and moulded. If it has a brim, the brim is wider than last year and apt to be irregular in width, or pleated, shirred, or draped. If it is brimless—a cap or a beret—then the crown is draped and shaped instead of being just a round flat piece, as it was in summer 1929.

Point III. It is more femininely formal. The emphasizing of the forehead and eyes gives a more soft and feminine effect. And the details of moulding and draping give more importance and formality. And the most important note for the 1930 hat—a lifted, off-the-face effect that is called the Gainsborough look—is very feminine and formal.

1930 Dress

Point I. An indicated normal waistline. Indicated by a belt, by moulding, or by blousing. The waistline of the summer, 1929, dress was much lower—at the middle or top of the hips.

Point II. More intricate detail. In summer, 1929, the typical dress was a straight little short tube, with a few pleats or bows for decoration. Any truly 1930 dress is sure to have some intricacy of detail, whether it is a peplum, a bolero, a cape effect, or subtle drapery.

Point III. That long-limbed look. 1930 dresses are actually longer—upper calf for sport, middle calf for general wear, lower calf for formal afternoon, and ankle-length for evening. Besides, the length from waist to hem is much longer than the length from waistline to neck. In summer, 1929, the typical dress came just below the knee. And the waistline was low, so that the lengths from hem to waistline and from waistline to neck were even. That made the skirt look even shorter than it really was.

Tomorrow—Jacket costumes for all day long.

Heart and Home -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Await His Advances

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a regular reader of your columns and thought I would ask you for advice. Through a girl friend I met a fellow who is 19 years old and who has high opinions of me. In his quiet way he even told me that he likes me. I am two years younger than he and have been out with him twice, but not alone, for his brother took my friend out. He seems to be very bashful. How can I encourage him to come to my home and take me out without lowering his opinion? BEATRICE.

Dear Beatrice—If I were you I would just do nothing at all. The young man has given plenty of evidence that he thinks well of you, and you should let him make the advances. He is evidently not at all forward, and I should advise you not to spoil the good impression he has of you.

Twelve-Year-Old in "Love"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady of 12 and am very much in love with a young man of 17. He has gone to camp for a month. When he comes back he intends to take me for a long ride. Shall I go? Mother thinks I am too young, but she is always interfering in my affairs. Please help me. PERPLEXED.

Dear Perplexed—If a mother isn't entitled to "interfere" in the life of a 12-year-old daughter, then I don't know who in the world is. Forget your "love" affairs, young lady, and have a little confidence in your mother. She is the best friend you've got in the world, and you'll never regret making a confidant of her. Trust her to let you have proper boy friends when the time comes, which certainly should not be for another five years.

Send Him a Note

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a constant reader of your column in the Boston Evening American. I hope you can help me. I went with a young man for six months, and he went to Cleveland to pay a visit to his parents. He promised to write but I haven't heard from him yet, and it is three weeks ago. Would you advise me to forget him or continue waiting for a letter. I would not care to write to him first. PUZZLED.

Dear Puzzled—A change of environment often causes severe lapse of memory. When we get back to the home town, it's surprising how quickly we can forget those we met in another place. If you have his address there would be no harm in sending him a short, friendly note, reminding him of his promise. If you don't hear from him after that forget him.

Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer readers' questions regarding love problems which may be troubling them. Write on one side of the paper only.

Some Points on Etiquette

By MRS. BEECKMAN

A Courtesy to the Mother

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When having a young man for dinner at my home, should I serve my mother first and then myself, or should the young man be served first? G. C.

Serve your mother first, then the young man, and then, last, yourself.

Veil or Hat for Bride

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—It is proper for a bride to wear a veil or a hat at an afternoon wedding in her home?

2—What do you think of my penmanship and stationery?

1—Either is correct—it depends on the choice of the bride, and whether she wishes to have a formal or an informal wedding.

2—Your handwriting is good, but a bit faintly written. Use heavier ink, perhaps, to give backbone to your writing.

I am not a bit enthusiastic about letter paper of this one-sheet kind. To my mind it gives an impression of a business letter. Why not get the double-sheeted kind, of the white of your present paper?

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

How to Keep Well

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Use Common Sense in Foods

Dr. Copeland

Most of our maladies and health troubles are due to faulty diet. In the summer time indiscretions in eating and drinking are causes for a great deal of trouble.

One such disturbance is inflammation of the inside lining membrane of the intestines, a condition called "enteritis." Most forms of enteritis are of the catarrhal type. In simple language, this means that there is such an irritation or inflammation of the mucous membrane of the bowel as to result in an increased flow of mucus. It is just as much a catarrhal condition as a head cold where there is a marked increase in the flow of mucus from the nose.

Any part of the intestinal tract may be involved in a catarrhal inflammation. When there is a disturbance of any one location it is apt to involve the entire membrane lining.

The very common cause of enteritis with children especially is the taking of improper food. It may be produced by overeating and with most people, the eating of unripe fruit may bring it on.

Many of us find that some particular food will cause diarrhea, the reason being that that particular food acts as a poison to the intestinal tract. Spoiled milk, strong coffee and plums are foodstuffs which irritate some persons.

In young children and infants the cause is usually found in the quality of the milk. Older children who overeat ice cream, candy, pastry or soda drinks are very apt to be troubled in this way. Or any person who eats bad meat, unclean food or becomes infected by contaminated food handlers may have an attack of diarrhea.

In a pronounced case of enteritis there may be severe pain. A collicky pain is quite common where the cause is taking the wrong kind of food. There may be a slight amount of fever and great thirst and so the tongue may be dry and coated. If the diarrhea continues for some time there will be prostration and a sense of illness. It is always wise to consult a doctor in such cases.

Colic may be relieved by hot moist compresses to the abdomen, or a hot water bottle or a hot tub bath. Frequent enemas will help.

Elsie Robinson

Does that give you a start? Maybe you've been thinking that you have a monopoly on sensitiveness—that no one else suffers quite as you do. That your idea about yourself? Then get over it. You're just one out of millions, partner. There's nothing unique about your trouble, and there's nothing obscure about its cause or cure.

Sensitiveness is not a sign of a great or rare mind. It is the sign of a very tight, immature mind—a baby mind—a mind that has never opened to the significance of the life about it.

Why are your sensitive? You're sensitive because mentally you're all out of focus. You center everything on yourself. You do not see other lives, other problems.

You think you do. You discuss other people. You may even fuss a great deal over other people. But always you are thinking of yourself—and of how various acts affect yourself.

And so you really never see other lives, and therefore you can establish no scale of comparison—no relative value. And everything, no matter how trifling, gets you on the raw.

What's the cure for sensitiveness? Open your mind. Look beyond yourself. Grow some perspective. Learn to be impersonal—as impersonal about people as you are about climate.

The climate is a lively and often a very disagreeable factor in your life. It can cause you quite as much discomfort as the most malicious person. But you keep that discomfort on the surface—you don't let it get inside—you don't "take it to heart."

Unless you are a most childish person, you don't get mad at thunderstorms or hurt by frosts or insulted by hot days. You have learned to take these things impersonally. You realize that thunder and frost and hot days happen to every one—they are part of all life.

But snubs and spite and loneliness and loss and disappointment also happen to everyone—they, too, are part of all life. They are as universal as climate. They are the result of the every-varying climate of human nature.

God isn't picking on you—people aren't conspiring against you—people are just HAPPENING as climate is happening, and you're in the midst of it all. And your feelings are getting frightfully hurt because you take their actions personally.

Stop thinking of your feelings for a while and think of the other fellow's. He may seem to aim at you, but he really isn't—any more than the fog is aimed at you.

He's just functioning, and that's his business. DON'T MAKE IT YOURS. And if you do get bruised—as is inevitable with even the best balanced natures—keep your bruises outside, as you'd keep sunburn or frostbite. Don't let them get through to your soul.

Get a new slant—learn that this isn't a one-man show—move with the parade and realize that whatever is happening to you is also happening to the rest of the marchers—there's the cure for sensitiveness. That is, if you really want to be cured. Some don't.

BEAUTY BOX

Grace is the result of rythmic movement. Good dancers move gracefully. The step should be light and buoyant, the carriage erect. Young girls particularly require physical education, the kind of exercise that overcomes awkwardness and clumsiness.

Skinny gals must eat plenty of butter and drink milk. If emancipation puts her under normal weight she should take cod liver oil, which is not only fattening, but which contains elements that create pep in the human frame. Plenty of fresh air, plenty of sleep and no vigorous exercises form a good working rule for the willowies.

Planning for the Guest of the Week-End

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over WHDH by the Boston Evening American

Martha Lee.

WEEK-END parties can be made delightful occasions or a real burden all depending on whether the hostess plans her party carefully or not.

The menu making requires very special attention, for meals that require little last minute preparation will mean more leisure for the hostess and more time for her to spend with her guests.

Early in the week take an inventory of your supplies and write down your plans in black and white. Look over your silver and linen and be sure that everything is ready to use. If your guests are coming Saturday try to do some baking Thursday. Drop Cookies for instance, can be made and stored in a tight tin box and they are most convenient for afternoon tea or dessert with fresh fruit and cream.

On Friday make enough salad dressing to carry through Saturday and Sunday. Saturday morning wash enough lettuce for the entire time that your guests are to be with you, put in the icebox in an air-tight container. With lettuce and salad dressing on hand, ready to use, salad making is greatly simplified and salads are certainly the backbone of hot weather cookery.

The Sunday meal must, of course be planned according to the way in which the day is to be spent. If a long Sunday morning nap is to be indulged in a late substantial breakfast with a 6 o'clock dinner at night is best. But if golf or church is on the program an early lighter breakfast will be wanted with dinner at 2 and a light supper at about 7. The wise hostess rises at least an hour before her guests Sunday morning. This uninterrupted hour makes her duties for the whole day much lighter.

For the Saturday night dinner you might have chilled consomme, or if the day is cool, cream of mushroom soup made with canned mushrooms put through the fine knife of your meat chopper, jellied meat loaf with tiny French fried potatoes (really shoestring potatoes), new beets and orange sauce, celery and olives, tomato and cream cheese salad, pineapple sherbet, ginger ale. For Sunday breakfast chilled cantaloupe, puffy omelet with crisp bacon, Melba toast with marmalade and coffee. For Sunday dinner watermelon cubes, roast leg of lamb with mint jelly, parsley, potatoes, buttered peas, stuffed cucumber salad, peach ice cream with marguerites. And for Sunday night supper, shrimp salad, graham nut bread sandwiches, cream cheese and olive sandwiches, chocolate cake and iced coffee.

You can take away some of the items on these menus or add to them, but I do hope they'll help as a skeleton on which to build your week-end menus.

The soup, the jellied meat loaf, the beets and the orange sauce, the celery, the tomato and cream cheese salad and the marguerites and the stuffed cucumbers, all can be prepared as far ahead as Friday for last minute warming.

For a special treat for your guests try for dessert a chilled half cantaloupe filled with red raspberries. To be extra special put a big tbsp. of vanilla ice cream under the raspberries.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Women's Exchange

Mrs. E. A. H. of Washington st., Dorchester, sends Mrs. H. H. D. this requested recipe for Carp en Filets.

CARP EN FILETS

2 carp
4 common crackers
1 whole egg
1 clove of garlic or onion
½ cup of almonds
1 tsp. of salt
¼ tsp. pepper (more or less)
1 small bayleaf
5 whole allspice
2 beaten egg yolks

(The almonds, allspice and bayleaf may be omitted). Remove the scales, fins and head of fish, also the intestines. The fish must not be split open; the intestines can easily be pulled out at the head. Now cut the carp across in about one inch wide slices. Wash well and remove the fish from the skin. This leaves the skin in one inch wide bands (as rubber bands). Bone the fish and put the bones and head on to boil with the bayleaf, allspice, salt and a small sliced onion. While this is boiling—chop the fish fine, grind the almonds, onion and crackers and add it together with one whole egg to the chopped fish. Mix thoroughly and fill the skins with the mixture. Strain the bones from the water (add more water if needed) and when boiling drop in the carp filets. Boil slowly about 20 to 30 minutes. Remove carefully from the water and add to the water (slowly) the beaten egg yolks, this thickens it as a sauce. Season with salt and pepper to taste. This is usually served cold. Also good using haddock.

Tomorrow's Table

BREAKFAST

HONORABLE MENTION

Coming in from the golf links the other day in my sport attire, I saw my nephew in a long-trousered suit, a style of clothing that seems to be fashionable for the modern youngster. I noticed that he looked at me rather wistfully and I asked him what the matter was.

"Gee!" he said, "I'll be glad when I get old enough to wear short pants." ROBERT S. DUNCAN.

EVENING New York Stocks AMERICAN News of Street MARKETS

RECOVERY OF STOCK PRICES IS RESUMED

New York, July 9. Bullish forces held undisputed sway most of the session today on the New York Stock Exchange.

The short covering which appeared yesterday was carried further and share prices generally made fair progress, but trading progressed at a snail's pace.

TRADERS TURN BULLS

Traders were disposed to try their luck on the long side of the market, after the meager success of operations on the short side during the past few days and found news developments, while not very conclusive, largely in their favor.

The commodity markets gave a better account of themselves, particularly grains, and trade news showed few further recessions and some slight improvement.

The weekly steel trade reviews were rather vague. "Iron Age" said the immediate prospects were not promising, but estimated that steel production had returned to 56 per cent of capacity, as compared to recent estimates of a curtailment to 48 per cent late last week.

Steel former ... on Trade Review said ... bottom are numerous, but emanate chiefly outside of the industry. Prices appeared to be more staple, but pig iron sagged further during the past week.

The weekly report of freight car loadings covering the week ended June 28, showed a gain of nearly 16,000 cars over the previous week, but the movement continued well under the like period of recent years. This report, however, together with the decision of the I. C. C. to permit an increase in class freight rates, stimulated some buying of the rails.

FACTORS FOR ADVANCE

Other factors favoring the advance included a report that the monthly figures for building contracts would show that June reached the best level since July, 1929, and the action of Nash directors in reducing the annual dividend rate to only $4, from $6.

As the company earned only $1.56 in the first half of its fiscal year, it appears that the management looks for better days. Also, commercial paper dealers reported that business is beginning to borrow more. Call money held at 2½ per cent.

A rumor, unconfirmable and regarded with strong suspicion in banking and brokerage quarters, had it that a large bull pool was being organized, under the sponsorship of a prominent operator. At least this rumor provided some variation from the wild bear propaganda that has been circulating about speculative quarters for several weeks.

In the rails, Chesapeake & Ohio, Rock Island, Chesapeake Corporation, Missouri Pacific and Union Pacific mounted 3 to 5, or more. Other shares gaining about 5 points included Safeway Stores, Auburn, Allied Chemical and Eastman Kodak. Such shares as U. S. Steel, American Telephone and American Can sold up about 2 to 3 and Radio and General Electric worked a little higher.

During the early afternoon oils turned upward, with a gain of more than 2 points in Standard of New Jersey, reflecting the American Petroleum Institute's weekly figures, showing a reduction in crude output and a good drop in gasoline in storage. Also, President Hoover signed the bill to encourage unit operation of oil pools, which is expected to aid in production control.

Constructive operations in the late dealings were concentrated in large part on such shares as American Can, Consolidated Gas, Westinghouse Electric, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Air Reduction, which were up 3 to 7 points.

U. S. Steel hovered around 158 and the list generally absorbed profit-taking well. The close was strong.

Cambridge's Loan Given to Shawmut

Cambridge, awarded to Shawmut Corp. at 2.09 per cent discount its $1,000,000 loan July 9 and payable November 7, 1930. Other bidders were Salomon Bros. & Hutzler at 2.16 per cent discount, Harvard Trust Co. 2.23 per cent discount plus $3.00 and Central Trust Co. 2.23 per cent discount plus $2.00.

Brockton awarded to Salomon Bros. & Hutzler at 2.24 per cent discount plus $4, $300,000 notes dated July 9, 1930 and due January 8, 1931. Other bidders were Brockton National Co. 2.28 per cent plus $5; Plymouth County Trust Co., 2.28 per cent; Home National Bank of Brockton, 2.32 per cent; and Faxon, Gade & Co., 2.89 per cent.

Corporate Financing For Month Larger Than Year Ago

New York, July 9 (AP)—Corporate financing for the month of June totaled $768,600,000, as compared with $766,700,000 in the like month last year, a compilation by Standard Statistics Co. shows. Bond offerings were 85 per cent greater than in June 1929, while offerings of stock showed a sharp decline. Corporate financing for the first six months this year amounted to $4,813,100,000, compared with $6,524,500,000 in the corresponding period last year.

ACCESSORIES IN EXPANSION OVERSEAS

By FRANK H. MELOON

In State St. circles we are told a number of the leading American manufacturers of automobile accessories are laying extensive plans for expansion overseas. These plans are likely shortly to be made public in definite form. Action has been made necessary, it is declared, by the new U. S. tariff.

George Eastman, according to "Fortune," the business monthly, still clings to the old-fashioned, roll-topped desk. Recently, he moved his office to new quarters, but the roll-top desk went along just the same. Louis F. Swift transacts much of his business at a stand-up desk, similar to the ones clerks used in the 1890's. On occasions he sits down on a high swivel chair. The rest of the office is in keeping. Among other unique offices pictured in "Fortune" are those of David Belasco, crammed with books, pictures, cups, shields, animal heads and knick-knacks of all kinds, and of William Wrigley, Jr., who insists on western pictures on his walls and an elephant on the oval table which serves as his desk.

Yetman's Statistical Service, discussing the automobile industry, states:

"The current preference for low-priced cars is still believed to be temporary and the extreme spread between their sales and production and those of the higher priced classes has reached its peak, according to recent assertions.

"Replacement demand has shown consistent growth and this promises to be a large contributor to maintenance of sufficient business for a more stabilized industry. Foreign demand has shown rapid expansion in recent years, but uncertainty due to the effect of the new tariff law may be at least a temporary adverse factor.

"That the industry has favorable long term prospects seems a natural conclusion. Although automotive securities appear quite thoroughly deflated, the current unsettlement in general stock market conditions demands extreme care in making commitments even in the strongest companies."

Judging from what is to be seen at Alton Bay and the Weirs, the craze for costly motor craft continues unabated. Cars of moderate and high-priced classes are the rule rather than the exception all along the northern Maine and New Hampshire highways. New York, July 9—Rubber futures were barely steady today. July, 11.50; Sept. 11.70; December, 12.20. New contracts: September, 11.86; December, 12.20.

Canadian National

Canadian National gross for fourth week of June was $5,969,864, against $7,387,166 in 1929; June $19,405,728, against $28,016,481.

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

BRITISH FORD

P. S., Lynn—What do you think of my plan to buy 50 shares of Ford, Ltd., to hold for one or two years?

Ans.—While speculative, this issue is believed to hold a reasonable degree of promise. Of course, its future depends on business to come. The new tariff is expected to be helpful in some of the countries covered by the company's subsidiaries.

LESS THAN BANK PAYS

Miss L. W., Nantasket—I am self-supporting, a savings bank depositor. A friend told me to buy Air Reduction. Is that a good stock?

Ans.—Air Reduction at recent levels yields less than 3 per cent. To withdraw money from the savings bank to buy stocks paying less might be unbusinesslike. The company, however, has paid dividends with extras from 1917. Since three-for-one split in March, 1929, the annual rate has been $3 a share. $1.50 extra was paid October, 1929. How much cash have you? You may need bonds.

GOOD RECORD

F. G., Boston—A few months ago I asked your opinion of a certain stock and you suggested I leave it alone. Now I want to know what you think of a purchase of Texas Corporation.

Ans.—Texas Corporation has an excellent record of earnings and dividends. Payments of $3 a share annually have been distributed since 1912. In 1921 and 1927 stockholders received 10 per cent extra in stock. In 1929 earnings of $4.90 a share on 9,850,000 shares compared with $5.35 on 8,443,354 shares outstanding in 1928. At recent lower levels the yield was close to 6 per cent. What is the extent of your capital?

$2,300,000 Building Contracts Signed

George A. Fuller Co., construction subsidiary of United States Realty & Improvement Co., signed up $2,300,000 of new contracts Tu[illegible]day, including a theater building in Milwaukee, Taylor Hall at [illegible]rnell University and an addition to the Central Hanover [illegible]ust B[illegible]lding, 60 Broadway, New York.

The company h[illegible] [illegible] work at the rate of about $2,500,000 a month, and probably now has around $35,000,000 of unfinished contracts on its books.

New Tax for Italian Defense

Washington, July 9—Italy has levied a new sales tax of 1½ per cent on all sales. The tax is to provide funds for national defense and public works.

CURB MARKET SENTIMENT IS IMPROVED

New York, July 9—Sentiment appeared to be somewhat more cheerful on the Curb market today.

For the most part, the principal trading stocks moved narrowly, but there were a few exceptions to the rule, suggesting small pool accumulations.

Utilities did little and the broadest advances appeared in specialties and industrials. Anglo-Chilean Nitrate soared several points under rather steady inquiry. Dresser Manufacturing advanced in response to announcement of new contracts for couplings on Natural Gas Lines, one of which is to be laid from the Texas fields to Chicago.

There was also sufficient demand for Atlantic Coast Fisheries, U. S. Gymsum and Insurance Company of North America to lift prices a point or so.

Electric Bond & Share was sluggish, moving up about a point. United Light A, St. Regis Paper and American Light & Traction were moderately higher, but in general there was little disposition to do more with the utility group than to cover minor positions.

The oils were firm. Humble and Gulf rallied a couple of points, while Cities Service, Ohio Oil, Missouri Kansas Pipe and Vacuum improved nominally.

With the exception of Transamerica, which had another sinking spell, the investment trusts and investment holding company stocks tended higher. Goldman Sachs advanced nearly 2 points, but was unable to hold all of the rise.

Call money renewed at 3 per cent.

BOND MARKET ADVANCES

New York, July 9—Broadened activity developed in the listed bond market, fusing new vitality into the better grade of issues which steadily advanced.

A striking feature of the movement of railroad bonds has been the quick response they have made to very limited offerings. San Francisco 4½s, Union Pacific 4s, Pennsylvania gold 5s, Missouri Pacific 5½, Great Northern 5½s, Canadian Pacific 4½s, were among the railroad issues which ruled higher today.

Several convertible issues and warrant bonds reflected the firmness of stocks. St. Paul adjustment 5s were active and firm. Transcontinental Oil warrant 6s equalled its 1930 high. American Natural Gas 6½s moved downward, dropping 5 points on thin sales.

Movement among foreign bonds was upward for the most part. Australian issues continued active and firm. German 5½s were unchanged. Chilean issues were the firmest spot in the South American group. Colombia Mortgage Bank 6½s lost 2 points.

There was little activity in United States Governments.

Wheat Is Higher in Chicago Market

Chicago, July 9 (AP)—Fresh upturns in wheat prices today followed a hesitant start. Extreme high temperatures and widespread dearth of rain, impairing spring wheat crop prospects, acted as more than a counterbalance for laggard European quotations, and so, too, did indications of good export demand overnight.

Starting unchanged to ⅛c off, Chicago wheat showed a material all around advance later, corn displayed independent strength, opening ⅛-⅝c higher, and subsequently continuing to mount. Oats were firm. Provisions declined.

Movement of Gold to France Is Seen

New York, July 9—New York Federal Reserve Bank announced $3,000,000 gold had been placed under earmark for foreign account. This has the same effect on the country's gold stock as an export, since title changes hands, although the gold is not actually shipped. The transaction represents the second largest individual loss of gold this year. Foreign exchange circles believe the current transaction was carried out for account of France and may possibly be the forerunner of the movement discussed the past week.

Trading in Cotton Is to Be Limited

New York, July 9—In accordance with a provision of Section 114 of the by-laws, board of managers of New York Cotton Exchange has unanimously adopted a resolution prescribing as the maximum limit of interest in future contracts for delivery in any one month by any member, firm or corporation, and his or its affiliation, 150,000 bales in July and August, 1930; 250,000 in September, 1930; 1,000,000 in October, 1930, and in all months up to and including June, 1931.

Australian Loan Partly for U. S.

London, July 9—Negotiations for an Australian loan are nearing completion. Total will be about £12,000,000, of which the portion offered in the United States will be between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 and that in Great Britain about £4,000,000. Yield is likely to be over 7 per cent.

This Move May Speed Return of Prosperity

Money Unlendable in Wall Street Should, Forbes Declares, Quicken Mortgage Loans and Revive Building

By B. C. FORBES

New York, July 9—American life is being recast. Our communities and cities originally sprang up around railway stations and especially railway terminals.

B. C. Forbes.

The population of Manhattan Island is steadily decreasing. The population of surrounding suburbs is steadily increasing, and is destined to continue to increase.

How? Why?

The most basic and far-reaching industry in America—at least, next to agriculture—is building. All through the "Coolidge boom" building was breaking records. Building activity probably was the one factor contributing most [illegible]al activity.

Then came unrestrained stock speculation. This speculation sent money rates soaring. Wall Street began paying a premium for loanable funds. Last year it paid such a premium that funds were drawn from practically every other financial center throughout the world. Call money rates went as high as 20 per cent and time loans were in demand at as high as 9½ per cent.

What was the result?

Wall Street brokers had the first call on loanable funds. Their borrowings rose from a minimum of $4,322,500,000 in the previous year to a maximum of $8,549,000,000 last year. Not only were banking funds freely furnished brokers, but non-banking money was drawn from every corner of the United States, as well as from foreign centers to swell brokers' borrowings.

Stock speculation absorbed so much money, and was ready to pay such abnormal rates, that funds were withdrawn from other uses. Especially did it become impossible to raise mortgage money at 6 or even 7 per cent when Wall Street was bidding substantially higher rates. The inevitable result was that building operations slowed down. And when building operations slowed down, many collateral industries were prejudically affected. Probably the slackening in construction was more responsible than any other one influence for the dwindling of prosperity and employment.

What is the situation today?

Instead of bidding 9½ per cent for time money and 10 to 20 per cent for call money, all that Wall Street is prepared to pay today is 1½ to 3 per cent for demand loans and 2¼ to 3 per cent for time money. The consequence is that brokers are now borrowing only $3,727,700,000 contrasted with their maximum of $8,549,000,000 last year. Whereas corporations, institutions and individuals outside of the banking world pumped as much as $3,940,000,000 into the stock market last year, they find little allurement in the abnormally low rates which have lately ruled, with the result that they are lending only $856,000,000 in Wall Street today.

Moreover, the Federal Reserve Board has made known very plainly that it is determined to bring about and to maintain extremely easy money rates. Our reserve system certainly is in a position to do so, for it is carrying a reserve ration of 80.7 per cent, which is more than twice the legal requirements.

What has all this to do with building or with the hastening of returning prosperity? Or with the movement from congested city centers to suburbs?

This: Now that the interest rates available in Wall Street are wholly unattractive, and now that the Federal Reserve authorities are determined to bring about a period of very easy money, insurance companies and other institutional lenders should promptly and seriously consider the advisability of putting out more of their loanable funds in the form of mortgages, especially mortgages on suburban building.

The fancy rates obtainable on mortgages last year are no longer obtainable. Not only so, but the trend indisputably is toward lower mortgage rates than those which have recently ruled. I understand that the pressure for profitable outlets for insurance and suchlike loanable money has already brought about a 5 per cent mortgage rate for choice suburban building in New York territory.

Would it not, therefore, be prudent for lenders to consider the advisability of financing suburban home building now, before the return available declines further?

Just as excessively dear money throttled our prosperity, so the pressure to find employment for the present superabundance of money in our leading financial centers will, in one way or another, bring about a revival of business activity and prosperity.

* * *

Conditions now are such that the risk of not acting courageously is greater than the risk involved in acting courageously.

Ginger Ale Sales Set a High Record

A note of confidence is provided in a statement by P. D. Saylor, president of Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., in which he announces the largest single day's sales in the history of the company as well as the fact that profits in June exceeded those for June 1929.

"'On June 30,' states Mr. Saylor, 'sales reached one hundred thirty-seven carloads, the largest single day's business in the history of our company. In order to realize the dimensions of such a day's sales, it is explained that one hundred thirty-seven carloads of Canada Dry represents over two millions of bottles. From indications, however, it is virtually safe to predict that this record will be exceeded within the next few months. This confidence is supported, among other factors, by the fact that Canada Dry's profits during June 1930 exceeded those of June 1929'."

Record Orders for Parachutes Given

Irving Air Chute Co. has been awarded an order from the United States Army for 1435 parachutes, largest order the company ever received from the government. Work will be started immediately at the Buffalo plant and deliveries made at rate of 200 a month.

South Coast Co. Dealings Held Up

Gasoline Output Is to Be Reduced

New York, July 9—Tidewater Associated Oil will reduce its gasoline production for July and August by 15 per cent.

Bridgeport Machine

Bridgeport Machine Co. sales for six months ending June 30 were $2,216,000, against $1,43,000 in like 1929 period.

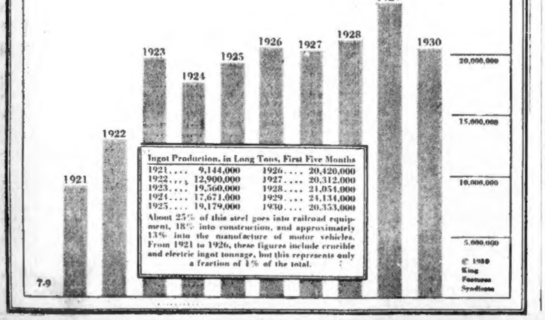
ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

Steel Production Practically Normal

The total production of Bessemer and open-hearth steel ingots throughout the United States during the first five months of 1930 is compared with the corresponding periods of the past nine years. Sources: American Iron and Steel Institute and The Iron Age.

The production of crude steel is one of the soundest indexes of basic industrial activity. Excluding the abnormal 1929, the output in 1930 exceeds the average for the four preceding years of 1928, 1927, 1926 and 1925.



Ingot Production, in Long Tons, First Five Months
1921	9,144,000	1926	20,420,000
1922	12,900,000	1927	20,312,000
1923	19,560,000	1928	21,054,000
1924	17,671,000	1929	24,134,000
1925	19,179,000	1930	20,353,000

About 25% of this steel goes into railroad equipment, 18% into construction, and approximately 13% into the manufacture of motor vehicles. From 1921 to 1926, these figures include crucible and electric ingot tonnage, but this represents only a fraction of 1% of the total.

WALTER JOHNSON ON WHDH TOMORROW A. M.

Lovers of sport will be glad to hear that Walter Johnson, manager of the Washington Senators, will speak over Station WHDH tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. This broadcast comes through the courtesy of the Boston Evening American from whose studios this famous big league pitcher will speak.

The Senators' manager, whose time-worn record for pitching ability and sportsmanship leads all others, is perhaps the most dramatic figure in baseball today. Johnson will give a talk on his team's chance for winning the pennant and will also direct some instructions in regard to clean play to the boys. Joe Cashman, baseball editor of the American, will interview Johnson.

CONCERNING RADIO

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

While there are numerous great opera and concert singers whose golden voices have brought to them a large measure of admiration and success, there are none who command a warmer place in the hearts of the general public than does Ernestine Schumann-Heink, one of the greatest contraltos of all time.

Because of her very human qualities which have ever prompted her to extend an aiding hand to the less fortunate, and especially to ambitious young singers who were deserving, Mary McCoy, brilliant young soprano, is today enjoying a success in the musical world which seldom has been achieved by any singer in such a comparatively short time.

Discovered some three years ago by that great old dame of music, Miss McCoy's career since then has been meteoric; success upon success has been hers. And it is seldom that a new artist appears on the musical horizon and attracts the immediate attention of the American public.

When Madam Schumann-Heink celebrated her fiftieth consecutive year before the public with a Golden Jubilee Tour, Mary McCoy was accorded the signal honor of being chosen her assisting artist. Their tour of the country together was a triumph for the young soprano as well as for the famous, greatly loved "mother of music."

And now this fortunate young woman, followingg the trend of modern artists, has been drafted into the radio broadcasting field. She will be heard tonight in the Camel Pleasure Hour at 9:30, over the NBC Blue Network, and local stations WBZ-WBZA. Whether or not the microphone will reproduce her voice in all its beauty we do not know—it is a fact that some voices, especially female, do not reproduce at all good—but we understand her auditions are excellent, and that the radio audience will do well tonight to listen in.

The intervening time since last

Contralto

MARY McCOY, who will appear tonight on the Camel Pleasure Hour at 9:30, over WBZ-WBZA.

Wednesday has amply justified our prophesy that the melodious carillon, played by the noted Kamiel Felix Lefevere, Belgian carillonneur, from the church of Our Lady of Good Voyage, Gloucester, has made a decided appeal to the music-loving radio public, as it came over the air from Station WHDH.

So great has been the interest in this beautiful music, and so numerous have been the requests for a longer period of the program, that its sponsors, Frank Ferdinand, Inc., have arranged to continue the time from a half-hour to a full hour. The broadcast will now begin as originally scheduled, at 8:30 and continue until 9:30.

RADIOPINIONS

Walter Hagen who has held most of the professional golf titles that have ever been in existence, and who is regarded as the Beau Brummell of the golf course will give a preliminary survey of the U. S. Open Golf Championship tonight on the Coca Colo program over WEEI at 10:30. Hagen will talk with Grantland Rice in the studios of the Minneapolis NBC station. The tournament is being held at Minneapolis. It will be amusing to hear what Walter will say about his strongest rival, Bobby Jones.

BY ADHERING more closely to frolicsome melodies and avoiding symphonic and orchestral compositions, the Troika Bells program over WEEI smashed previous records and established a new high. They belong distinctly in the lighter musical category, and Genia Fonariova, the contralto of the organization, adapts herself successfully to the light spirit of the program and dodges the denser music of which she seems capable.

The drawing power of the crooner is great these days, but the blues singer is slowly eclipsing the disciple of Rudy.. Lee Morse, last night's Eveready guest artist, demonstrated low-down music in a deep, masculine voice. She shouldn't be a guest artist, but a regular feature. The orchestra played "Manhattan Moon," which strangely resembled "Manhattan Serenade." Therefore, it was good. Peculiar how Nat Shilkret can lead his group from the soothing balm of a sweet melody into a torrid, syncopated tune.

"Pleasant Hour," an expressive fantasy showed what Savino, the director of the Savino Tone pictures program over WNAC could do. For the most part the orchestra wasted itself on simple numbers meanwhile displaying its power to deal adequately with more difficult and higher classics.

It was vocal night on the RKO program from WEEI last night. "The Man I Love," with feeling as expressed by Dorothy Groody, "A Kiss in the Dark," with Hazen Glen in the soprano role, "Tea for Two," in a charming manner with Louise Groody doing the singing, and Ruth Etting, "Love Me or Leave Me" (nuff said.) All this gave the program a very feminine aspect in addition to its being a distinctly warbling one.

PORT OF BOSTON NEWS

By CARL MORRISON

Not even the ostrich gained anything from his "defense mechanism" of hiding his head in the comforting sands of illusion.

Shall the port of Boston hide its head in the sands of public ballyhoo of "prosperity" and "improving business" and "lessening unemployment"?

The answer is "No" as far as the New England Shippers Advisory Board of the American Railway Association is concerned. This board believes in facing the facts, and so demonstrates its belief in its latest bulletin.

Under the heading of "Exports, imports and port facilities," the committee reports:

"Your committee, responsive to a request for a forecast of the approximate volume of business anticipated for the months of July, August and September, 1930, as compared with the same months of the preceding year, is of the opinion that the general business situation, will result in less water borne traffic being handled through New England ports, during the months of July, August and September, 1930, as compared with the same months of last year. The effect of the new tariff legislation on foreign imports is problematical, but the general impression prevails that it will cause at least a temporary reduction in the volume of foreign imports."

DUTY TO CARGO

Hand in hand with proper assumption of liability and prompt payment of just claims goes the modern ocean carrier's program of claim prevention. Not only are just claims paid promptly, but recommendations are made to shippers, supported either by actual photographs or other evidence, designed to prevent damage through better packing. For instance, a shipper might send a piece of marble statuary wrapped in burlap only, and probably an arm would break off in transit. The modern carrier's conception of duty to cargo would prompt a recommendation to the shipper, supported by a photograph of the damaged statuary, that, in the future, such shipments be packed in stout crates or cases, properly braced and with suitable packing. The average shipper is fully as anxious as the carrier to have his shipment arrive in marketable condition. However, since he cannot actually see his goods while they are being handled and in transit, he does not always know just what is required in the way of packing to achieve this result. The carrier, on the other hand, sees them under all these circumstances and is, therefore, more capable of determining the sufficiency or insufficiency of packing and of making recommendations that are valid and valuable.

ON THE BRITANNIC

Rapidly vanishing are the days of the mess boys who peeled spuds for the ship's cook. Newspaper men who inspected the Britannic, world's largest cabin ship, noticed many motors distributed through the ship. These are used for driving doug mixers, potato peelers, dish washers, pantry hoists, ice-[illegible]ing machines and elevators. [illegible] he future, the sailor will prob[illegible] be a robot enlisted until he [illegible]rs out.

"THE DEVIL TO PAY"

We came across the origins of some old sea sayings, and will give these from time to time. Some of these seemingly have no connection with the waterfront. For instance, that vigorous expression of "The devil to pay" developed not on land but on sea. It has nothing to do with paying tributes to the woeful one, no matter how fully the person who uses the expression may be in the service of the chief of the fallen angels.

"To pay" in this sense means to cover with pitch the seams between the planks of a wooden ship after they have been filled with oakum. The "devil" refers to the most awkward seam in the vessel, hence its name, and if the "devil" is not "payed" the most difficult and disagreeable part of this necessary work still remains to be done.

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

Jos. A. Conry

He was a member of an early board of port directors for Boston, and performed efficiently and loyally. He made it his business to know every shoal, rock and current in the harbor.

While president of the City Council in 1896, Mr. Conry headed a delegation to Washington to secure congressional action for Boston Harbor. He surprised the committee by his thorough knowledge of the port.

Mr. Conry was at one time Russian consul in Boston and gave particular attention to building up American business relations with that country.

Stepdaughters of War

the sitter is saying, "fair love me, do them there bombs, can't leave me in peace——" up and down, up and down, he is waving up and down——

"Loaded. Six stretchers and four sitters."

Brake off. Clutch out. Gear. Gas. I am not doing it, it's doing itself somehow—crawling to the station gate——

Ploo-oop. Crash!

"Gordamighty," the sergeant is talking—"that was just beyond The Witch's 'And—what load?"

I cannot answer him—my lips are dry—they are sticking together—I cannot go out of the gate—I cannot go out of the gate towards the dropping bombs—

"Six stretchers and four sitters."

"Number Four," says the sergeant.

Number Four. Number Four. Number Four. That is where I have to go with my load of wounded men. Five miles along the open road. First to the right, on past Number One, turn left then left again and then straight on. Number Four.

Ploop-oop. Crash!

"I can see them distinct. Look."

The sitter can see them distinct, he says. I cannot look. Number Four. Five miles along the open road. First to the left. The sitter is counting the enemy planes. I can hear them now, the whirr of the engines. The sitter thinks they will discharge their cargo before they get into the camp.

Flash. I saw that one myself, it hit the hillside. The sitter has never seen the bombs so thick. Like rain. Ah, our planes are up now. No need to get the wind up. Far safer here than in a trench. If they hit an ambulance it will be a ruddy miracle.

He apologizes for the adjective. Once they drop one bomb and miss you, the next will clean pass over ten to one, it depends on the speed they're traveling——

The bombs are getting nearer.

A picnic after the trenches—the night he was hit—he goes into a long description of the bombardment that ended in his broken arm. Survived an eighteen-hour bombardment to trip over someone's boots head-first into a trench and break his bleedin' arm. Funny that. His pal Arthur would have enjoyed the joke if he'd been alive. But he wasn't. It was old Arthur's boots he'd tripped over. Not meant to stop one, and that's a dead cert——

The bombs are getting nearer.

What is it I fear? Not death. No, I only wish with all my heart I were dead and safely out of this hell. No, I do not fear death. Then what? I do not know. The dying, perhaps. I have seen men die so dreadfully. Oh, God, if there is a God, let me die swiftly and mercifully. Let me be here one second not thinking of dying and the next——

X-RAY
Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before July 13th. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is proved by the fact that they are accomplishing wonders in diseases of every description. No matter what your disease may be, remember D. J. Walsh, M. D., will make good the above offer.
LUMBAGO
Mrs. Lena Reynolds, 37 Austin St., Somerville, Mass., says:—"For two years I had been very nervous. I also had a pain in my back in the Lumbar region. "Lumbago." I had consulted five doctors. One said I had Sciatica, one strapped my back with adhesive tape. That helped so that I was able to walk. But I received no help from any of them for the pain or nervousness. I had my tonsils removed and a tooth extracted but was no better. I read of Dr. Walsh and went to him without confidence in his ability to help me. To my delight I grew better under Dr. Walsh's treatment until now I feel fine and permit the use of this testimonial in the hope of helping others who suffer as I did."

Senate Cannot Vote on MERITS of London Pact Without ALL Facts Before It

Senator McKellar asserts that only because Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, are supporting the humiliating London Naval Treaty, is its passage possible.

So the distinguished senators, members of the greatest deliberative body in the world, are not going to vote on the MERITS of the treaty.

They are not going to vote to uphold the United States naval authorities.

They are not going to vote for adequate naval defense for their country.

They are not going to vote to sustain the dignity of the nation.

They are not going to vote to preserve the fundamental constitutional rights of the Senate.

They are not going to vote patriotically.

They are not going to vote conscientiously.

They are not even going to vote intelligently.

They are going to vote to make a dictator out of the President.

They are going to vote to make a lot of lackeys of themselves, and to make the Senate a sort of backstairs club of White House servants and sycophants.

They are going to vote with the full facts refused them.

They are going to take orders and obey them.

They are going to accept a slap in the face and like it.

They are going to prove themselves unworthy of the confidence the fathers reposed in them.

They are going to show themselves unable to exercise the rights and powers which the Constitution confers upon them.

They are going to be false to their trust, false to themselves, false to the great record of their house, false to their country, false to the best interests of their people.

Why?

Because Senators Robinson and Reed were on the London naval commission.

The public thinks your so-called courtesy is merely lack of courage and lack of conviction.

They think it is over-consideration for your private interest, and lack of loyalty to the public interest.

If you senators realize that the London Naval Treaty is unjust to the United States, humiliating to our people, discouraging to our defenders, dangerous in its limitations on our own freedom of action, and equally dangerous in its concessions to foreign nations;

If you realize that it does NOT reduce armaments nor decrease taxation, and that it has not advantages to compensate for its very obvious and dangerous discredits and disadvantages;

What possible excuse is there for you to sacrifice the welfare of your constituents and to jeopardize the future of the country which bore you and which has so signally honored you?

What explanation can you offer the people who trusted you and whose trust you are betraying, except the paltry pitiful reason that Senator Reed and Senator Robinson do not wish to appear to have come home empty-handed from their trip abroad?

What kind of a Republican leader is Senator Reed?

In the opinion of the public even Grundy would be a better leader, for he at least has a mind of his own and some independent American spirit, and some appreciation of the dignity and importance of the body to which he belongs.

He may have unduly served a faction of his fellow-Americans to the detriment of other factions, but at least he has not subordinated his own country to the interests of foreign countries, and surrendered the independence of his own nation in the most important matter which can ever come before a sovereign people—the defense of their own families and their own homes.

What kind of a Democratic leader is Senator Robinson, who sacrifices not only his own country but his party to save and salve his own petty vanity?

What kind of a leader is it who is himself led by the nose by the fiscal agents of foreign powers, and whose chief adviser and supporter is a Wall Street speculator?

It is left to Senator Robinson to verify and confirm General Grant's historic prediction that no matter how foolish the Republicans may ever be, a Democrat will always be found who will excel them in folly; no matter how black the prospects of the Republican party may become, some Democrat can always be found who will make the prospects of his own party blacker and baser.

The citizens of this country need a new set of public officials. They need a new set of Republicans and a new set of Democrats.

They need a Senate which will be conscious of its own dignity and appreciative of the dignity of the nation.

They need representatives generally who are the servants of the public, and not the agents of private interests.

They need sturdy patriots and not time serving politicians.

And, above all, they need true Americans, loyal to their country and to their fellow-Americans, realizing their country's greatness, glorying in its achievements, rejoicing in its independence, proud of its splendid history and faithful to the precepts and principles of the far-seeing founders of the Republic.

It is time that those who love and honor and understand our country and our people should unite to keep the stream of our nation's life strong and pure, and our politics uncontaminated by foreign influence and interference.

Let us have America for Americans, and NONE BUT AMERICANS FOR AMERICA.

A Mother's Pleading

Victim of Tragedy, She Now Faces Eighth Motherhood in Asylum

Mrs. Josephine DiMori of the North End is confined in the Psychopathic Hospital. She is the mother of seven children. She expects shortly again to make the adventurous journey to the thin line between life and death and she pleads that her offspring may first see the light of day outside the walls of an insane asylum.

Until a year ago the health of this good woman's mind was unquestioned.

Then came a black-hand letter. Her son, aged eleven, had been seized. He would be restored to her if $5000 in cash were deposited at once in a specified cache. The fear-stricken father, sharing her love for the boy, borrowed and scraped the money together and placed it at the spot. The following day the mutilated body of the son was found in the Saugus marshes.

A month ago Mrs. DiMori was sent to the asylum. Grief had beset her, and in a moment of acute distress she had assaulted a man she assumed to be responsible for the fate of her boy. Behind the bars she goes, among those who have lost hope and mentality, while the experts argue over her case.

One says she suffers morbid depressions at times. The other asserts she has not the slightest indication of insanity. The judge is torn between doubts. "Let her come home, Judge," the father pleads. "She wants to see the children and to be with them. That is what she wants and needs."

Mrs. DiMori says to the judge: "I have suffered, Mr. Judge, for more than a year. My boy is gone. I see his face at night. Am I crazy because I am a mother? I have other children. But another bambino is coming. Please . . . not in that building . . . should my bambino be born."

It is unfortunate that the test of sanity is not a definite, accurate science, that the judge might then have no cause for his reluctance.

Cannot she be given the right to go down into the valley of the shadow of death and to experience the pangs and happiness of motherhood in the comfort which only her home can provide in such circumstances?

Experts can quibble and disagree. But is it asking too much to rely upon a Higher Power to take charge of this case with tender solicitude and unerring wisdom?

A Call for Courage

Faneuil Hall Tablet Points Way to Candidates

A new tablet has been placed on Faneuil Hall. It reads:

"This is Faneuil Hall, the cradle of liberty, built and given to the Town of Boston by Peter Faneuil, 1742; still used by a free people, 1930."

Faneuil Hall became historic because it was the abiding place of courageous men, unafraid to protest against the abuse or the neglect of their rights by venal, unresponsive or arbitrary governments.

It was the symbol of the attacks upon tyranny, of the nullification of the Writs of Assistance and of the crusade to banish slavery.

It was the home of the joint debate among fearless politicians, who were democratic enough to believe the people were entitled to know their policies on the serious issues and sturdy enough to defend them in public.

When we witness the ducking and dodging that goes on among the puerile successors of the great characters who have graced the stage of Faneuil Hall, we wonder what sort of an inscription may be written there fifty years hence.

Unless we bring all these candidates out into the open, unless we remind them as Lincoln said, "That a person unwilling to repose his confidence in the people is unworthy of their support," we will earn for ourselves a tablet on Faneuil Hall which would probably read:

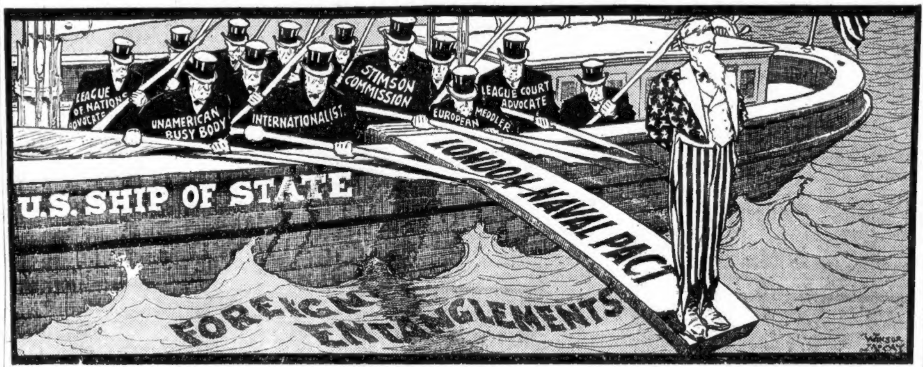
DROPPING THE PILOT—1930 STYLE



RATIFICATION of the London Naval Pact means United States Senate approval of an iniquitous treaty which would give Uncle Sam naval inferiority at a cost of one thousand million dollars and accord to foreign powers the right to tell this nation just what size and kind of a navy it shall build and maintain.

This pact spells radical departure from American traditions and would be the first step toward plunging this nation into foreign entanglements.

Modern pirates do not "doll-up" in comic opera garb when about to operate. They wear silk hats and frock coats, adopt a pious mien and talk "internationalism."

Study this McCay cartoon closely.

But we should be doing scant justice to this great and practical investigator or to his followers if we failed to note enormous mass of numerical evidence in support of his theory.

Turn back for a moment to the second cross-bred generation of the Four-o'clock plant. We catalogued the different kinds of fertilization which occur. Now it follows from the way in which the reproductive elements are made that among the pollen grains those which carry red will be just as numerous as those which carry white, and the same is true of the egg cells.

H. G. Wells

Moreover, fertilization is a perfectly random process; there is no reason to suppose that red-carrying pollen grains have a particular fancy for white-carrying eggs or anything like that.

So we can say that the four kinds of fertilization will occur in roughly equal proportions—in the next generation half the plants will be pink, one-quarter will be red and one-quarter white.

If the reader has any doubt of this reasoning let him take a pack of ordinary cards, shuffle it and spread it face downwards over a table. Let him draw the cards at random in pairs. He may happen to draw a red and a red, or a red and black, or a black and a red, or a black and a black.

The chances of these various combinations are equal. So, in the long run, he will get about twice as many mixed pairs as double reds or double blacks.

We are dealing, be it remembered, with chance, and the result is never perfectly exact. We say "in the long run." But chance is a fickle jade, and often the run is uncommonly long before the mathematical rectification is achieved.

The first two or three pairs to be turned up may happen to be pure red or pure black, but as the experiment is continued the proportions will tend to straighten out as we have prophesied.

The more pairs one turns up, the more closely will the proportions obtained approximate to those we have deduced.

So with numerical experiments in heredity. If one wants reliable results one must work with large numbers of individuals.

In the case of the Four-o'clock, if one were to take half a dozen seeds from a pink plant and rear them, anything might happen. They might even all be red (although odds against that are about 4000 to one).

But if one rears large numbers of the hybrid generation—fields of it—the proportions straighten out and assume the estimated values within a striking degree of accuracy.

How close actuality may be to expectation when really large numbers are bred is shown by the following example. Mendel and six subsequent investigators have all counted the second generation from crosses between yellow and green color in peas.

Their actual figures, totalled together, are: Yellow, 152,824; green, 50,676. The theoretical expectations with this number of plants are: Yellow, 152,625; green, 50,875. The actual ratio is 3.01 to 1, instead of 3 to 1—a divergence of about one-third of one per cent.

Using similar methods one can anticipate the results of other Mendelian crosses, and then confirm them experimentally.

Thus the second hybrid generation of the waltzing mouse cross will give three times as many normals as waltzers.

In the second generation of the peas cross there will be nine tall plants with yellow seeds, three short with yellow seeds, and three tall with green seeds to every one that is short with green seeds.

PARIS, JULY 9—As perfume is one of my lesser failings, all the phases of its making are interesting to me. Every time I come to Paris I go on a perfume jag, wandering about from shop to shop to be all squirted up with samples. Nothing pleases a perfume sales person so much as a customer who will try out new scents.

They sneak up on you with atomizers and—psst, psst, psst—before you know it you are fairly drenched with some exotic odor. I have come home from one of these excursions to have the dog crawl under the bed and refuse to come out. Dogs hate perfume.

Indeed, upon one occasion I arrived home looking as though I had been ducked in a flour barrel. It developed that some enthusiast had slipped up on my blind side and deluged me with sachet power. I always sweep into a perfume parlor and creep out. They pass out so many samples I seldom buy.

Perfume making is the largest single industry in France. Its richest men are parfumers. M. Coty, for instance, is a multi-millionaire, owner of newspapers, race track stables and rare paintings. Houbigant, Caron, Lubin are similarly in control of huge and growing fortunes.

Most of the essences for perfume making come from the flower country near de Grasse in Southern France. There are many manufacturers who are interested solely in the artistic side of the business and not its commercial rewards. They do not offer their output for general sale—just for connoisseurs.

There is a perfume known to the "perfume-minded" as No. 3. Many establishments offer a No. 3. But "the" No. 3 is only offered to an extremely select and limited clientele. Its secret formula is said to have been in the possession of one aristocratic French family for 150 years.

Perfume prices have gone beyond all bounds of reason, due largely to the heavy sales in America. Most French perfumes in the past ten years have increased in price more than 2000 per cent, although the rising cost of production has not reached 100 per cent. Perfume making is now another racket.

Every time I come through the hotel lobby the frock-coated brigands seem to pop from the woodwork and fly out of trap doors to line up and bow. I wish I had the courage some day to cry: "Keep your seats, messieurs, I'm not tipping this week."

I have never before been so completely burnt out with French servants as on this trip. Always the servant class here has wheedled the visitor, but there was an appeal in their complete obeisance. And they were friendly and kind. Today they have a studied insolence for those who do not respond to their wheedling. The amount one has to tip here is no larger than in America, but at home we are not bludgeoned into it.

* * *

Paris is packed with pouting wives. I have run across four with whom I am acquainted. They leave their husbands suddenly in a huff over some real or fancied pique and come here determined to sever the banns. But they soon cool off and after a while their lives become a waiting game—a game of waiting for hubby's cable to "come on home and be yourself."

There are 470,672 retail liquor establishments in France, or one bar for every 83 persons in the fair and inclement republic. Most of these places are called "bistros." They were formerly called "comptoirs." Gradually the English term "bar" is becoming general.

The term "bistro" is really a misnomer. In its original form it means one of those tiny standup places with a circular bar and a round table or two out on the sidewalk. Each bistro, like the old American saloon, is a market place for votes.

The flavor of the old-time bistro exists only around the central markets from midnight until sunup. They are rowdy and surly—the most insulting places getting the biggest trade. Each is aswirl with husky blue-bloused porters, shivering alcoholic wrecks, screeching viragos and the polite slummers in evening dress who always wind up a night of revelry at "Les Halles."

Sign in a little show window in rue des Petit Champs: "Wanted—beautiful and demure young girl with engaging smile and pretty teeth." Who wouldn't want a girl like that? Helas!
